At the meeting of the workers of the K. of C. War Fund drive Thursday evening at the K. of C. Home on Broadway the enthusiasm displayed during the previous evenings of the week was again demonstrated during the stirring and eulogistic addresses delivered at the meeting.

Harry P. Dodge led the audience in the rendition of "America," at the opening and "The Star Spangled Banner" at the close. While the luncheon was being served and in the interval between the speakers, it was under Mr. Dodge's able leadership that the assemblage gave vent to their feelings in singing "Over There," "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and "Where Do We Go From Here."

After the Rev. Father Briody invoked divine blessing, just before those present were seated at the table, Martin Daly sang several solos.

The first speaker of the evening was the Hon. William H. Grogan, who paid a great tribute to the Rev. Dr. Baragwanath as being one of the most finished and gifted orators that this city has ever had, as his address on Wednesday evening proved. Judge Hasbrouck and the Rev. Dr. Cady also came in for their just share of the eloquence of the previous evening's meeting. Mr. Grogan said that the Jew, the Protestant and the Catholic have broken bread together during the week and have given their talents and best efforts in a common cause and the accomplishment of a universal brotherhood is the result, as the magnificent achievement of the present week discloses. The Knights of Columbus and the Catholics are duty bound, the speaker went on to say, to assist in the raising of any fund started and join hands with the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and any other organization in the solicitation of funds, and it would be their pleasure to take their just burden of the work.

The next speaker was County Judge James Jenkins, who said he belonged to the four minute class and was, therefore, not very fast. He believed that this was the best organized campaign ever held in this city, and the plans were so carefully laid by the leaders that the followers had experienced very little difficulty in the gathering of the funds, so thoroughly was the team work laid out before hand that he thought an ideal plan had at last been conceived. The judge told of the two plans of ruling men, one was by doing good and the other was by doing ill. The imperialistic mind of frightfulness has adopted the latter, and we, the American people, are united because we have chosen the former. No great country has ever lived without religion as the empires which have fallen proves because of the starvation of religion and if we expect "our boys" to return with clean morals and unstained from the relaxation that men between the ages of 21 and 31—the draft age—seek in the hours of loneliness, it is essential that we take care of them in the temptations that beset a soldier in the conditions that surround the life of an army. As the men need to relax at this age of life it is the duty of the American public to see that "our boys" are provided with the kind that leads to the uplift and the betterment of their morals so that the great American race yet undeveloped will reap the reward of our sacrifice in the years to come.

Prof. Michael, as a careful observer of religion, politics and all social questions, expressed a profound joy at the development of the week. He said when the Jew, the Protestant, and the Catholic can work shoulder to shoulder and bend every effort for the one great cause it is a most gratifying and inspiring sight. He told of his great interest in the legislation of placing children between 12 and 16 years on farms and the great danger of leaving them untrained and undisciplined for five and a half months in the year as the world is looking to the children of America as their great hope when the readjustment period of the world's affairs arrives.

The Rev. John J. Hickey made a few remarks, and brought to mind that he believed Kingston to be the least characteristic of bigotry of any city in the state as in his 25 years of service here he has seen very little evidence of it among our citizens. He read the following telegrams:

New York, March 21, 1918.
Rev. J. J. Hickey,
Kingston, N. Y.

Please announce to campaign officers and workers that a permanent memorial of the campaign is being prepared for his eminence and that we desire the name of every campaign officer and worker for this record by Wednesday, March 26th. Special blanks will be mailed you for purpose of forwarding names and you are urged to be careful not to omit any faithful worker from the roster However, only the names of workers are designated as contributed list will be made up separately at a later date. We suggest that each captain and chairman of committee submit list of workers to campaign chairman, who with yourself, will certify and forward same to campaign headquarters.

F. B. Seeley, minister.
March 9th, 1918.

The Hon. A. J. Cook,
Kingston, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Cook:—

Through Vincent Gorman, I have just received your courteous invitation to be present at the meeting in the high school auditorium on Monday evening, when the War Work of the Knights of Columbus is to be presented to the people of Kingston. I greatly regret that a previous engagement of long standing will prevent my being present, but I beg you to say to the chairman of your campaign committee, J. M. Herbert, and to those having the work in charge, that they have my deepest interest and co-operation and may command me in any way that it is possible for me to serve them in their campaign.

The work of the Knights of Columbus together with the Y. M. C. A. in providing recreational, social and spiritual centers for our boys "over there" is too well-known and too priceless in value to permit any lover of God and humanity to hesitate in making real contribution and giving hearty support to it.

Appreciating the courtesy of your invitation and praying for success in your effort,

I beg to remain,
Very cordially yours,
F. B. SEELEY.

A. T. Clearwater
Counsellor at Law
Ulster County Savings Bank Building
Kingston, N. Y., March 21, 1918.

My dear Joe:—

It is with great pleasure that I enclose a contribution to the Knights of Columbus fund. To me the most impressive fact in your canvass is the hearty co-operation between the two great branches of the Christian church militant. It demonstrates again the truth for which I so often have contended, that in all the great essentials Kingston is the equal of any community in the land, a condition due to the high aspirations and united efforts of Catholic and Protestant alike.

With many kind regards, and best wishes for your unbounded success, I am as ever,

Very sincerely yours,
A. T. CLEARWATER.

Kingston, N. Y.

CAPTAIN ROOSA NEW C. H. AGENT

Well Known Steamboat Man of Newburgh Appointed Rondout Agent of Central-Hudson Line—Succeeds J. F. Steed.

Captain "Zach" Roosa of Newburgh, probably one of the best known steamboat men along the Hudson river, has been appointed the agent of the Central-Hudson Line at the office in this city, succeeding J. F. Steed, who will be transferred to another city.

Captain Roosa assumed his new duties today, getting the freight house and docks in shape for the reception of the steamer Poughkeepsie, which opens navigation between New York and this port on Monday. Captain Roosa has been in the employ of the Central-Hudson Line since 1872, and during that time has commanded about every steamer of the Central-Hudson Line.

During the past few years he has been the company's agent at Albany and Troy.

J. F. Steed, who has been capable agent of the Central-Hudson Line for a number of years, carries with him the best wishes of a host of friends. Just where he will be located is not known.

FOUR MEETINGS FOR FRUIT GROWERS

The Ulster County Farm Bureau Association has made arrangements to hold a series of four meetings in the fruit section of Ulster county to discuss the best methods of controlling the apple aphis, red bug and pear psylla. Meetings are to be held as follows:

Milton—Wednesday, March 27, at 7:30 p. m., at the Community House.

Clintondale—Saturday, March 30, at 7:30 p. m., at the Grange Hall.

Professor C. R. Crosby of the State College of Agriculture, extension specialist on insect pest control, will give an illustrated lecture on the control of above mentioned pests at all four meetings.

A general discussion and question box will follow each lecture.

This is an opportunity to spend a very profitable evening. Fruit growers cannot afford to miss it.

EAST KINGSTON HAS "GONE OVER"

The $1,500 K. of C. War Fund assignment to St. Colman's Church, East Kingston, has been exceeded. The Italian teams, who have aggregated $125.50 of the $1,232.75 previously reported, have a much larger sum still pledged, and the children's campaign in one school in East Kingston—Public School No. 16S—of which Miss Kathryn M. O'Connor is principal, will amount to $100 or more, with a second school in East Kingston—Public School No. 6—of which Miss Phoebe Cheshire is principal, still to be heard from.

One Chance Cost $3.

Joseph A. Brady, who is an agent for a well known brand of cigar, took a chance this morning by running his advertising car on the left hand side of Broadway, near Thomas street, and letting it stand for a minute or so. He was arrested by Officer Shader and Judge Schirick imposed a fine of $3 when he was arraigned in police court.

IN THE SERVICE OF OUR COUNTRY

PRIVATE PETER M[illegible]TCHEON.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. McCutcheon of Hudson street, now "Somewhere in France."

William Glaccum of New Rochelle, N. Y., who has been connected with the United Cigar Company's store on Wall street, this city, for several years, has enlisted in the United States Naval Reserve and will begin training at Pelham Bay Park next week.

Joseph Emmick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Emmick of Lindsley avenue is now stationed at Fort Bliss. He enlisted February 20 and was sent to Fort Slocum and later to Texas. He writes that he is enjoying the best of health and likes army life. His friends may write him at the following address: "Private Joseph Emmick, 7th Cavalry, Fort Bliss, El Paso, Texas.

Miss Helen Bryce of this city has recently received word from her brother, Ed. J. Bryce, who has been in France since last August, he being one of the first Kingston young men to enlist. His many friends in this city and Newburgh may address him: Private Ed. J. Bryce, 18th Co., 5th Rgt., U. S. Marines, care of New York Postmaster. Private Bryce writes that he is in excellent health.

FLOATING ICE OFF KINGSTON POINT

Hudson River Open Between Rondout and New York—First Boat Up Monday—Towing Season Opens Later—Other River Notes.

There is now open water between Rondout and New York, and the Hudson river off Kingston Point is full of floating ice. The first boat up the river for the season will be the Poughkeepsie of the Central Hudson Line which comes through Monday. No date has been fixed as yet for the opening of the towing season. The floating ice in the river is not bothering the Transport which has no difficulty in keeping close to her schedule.

From Hudson comes the report that the ice was moving out at that point Thursday, and the danger of freshets is past.

Thursday night Frank M. Best opened the lighthouse at Hudson which is three days earlier than last year.

The ferry George H. Power made its first trip of the season between Athens and Hudson Thursday morning, experiencing little difficulty. Last year the first trip was made March 24.

Late Thursday the ice in front of Coxsackie broke up.

The Saugerties and New York Steamboat Company expect to be able to start the steamer Ida making trips between Saugerties and New York next week.

The ice this season has been the heaviest rivermen remember during the past thirty years. Thirty inches of ice was common and it was said that three feet of ice was found in a few places along the Hudson the latter part of January.

The ice has been breaking up gradually and moving out of the river without kicking up much trouble in this vicinity.

Miller Goes With Van Benschoten

A. C. Miller, the well known automobile salesman and accessory man, has accepted a position with Van's Garage of this city, located at Nos. 529-531 Broadway. John Van Benschoten, proprietor of this garage has put in a very up-to-date accessory store, which Mr. Miller will have charge of. In addition to this Mr. Van Benschoten has the agency for the Dodge, Chalmers, Peerless, Marmon, Nash and Studebaker pleasure cars; also Nash trucks and Smith-Form-A-Trucks. J. D. Schenck is salesmanager of the company.

Some One Had Chicken Dinner.

Germans in Mass Formation Mowed Down by Machine Gun Fire Without Making Any Real Headway---Fighting Breaks Out on Italian Front---"Decisive Battle" Says Berlin Paper.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, March 22.—A hurricane of battle, in which the Germans suffered terrific losses, raged in the darkness of last night along fifty miles of the British front in France from the Sensee river, opposite Arras, to the Oise river south of St. Quentin.

At every point the Germans were held to their battle positions, the war office announced today.

After midnight a comparative lull settled down upon the blood-soaked field, but Field Marshal Haig reported this morning that a renewal of the German drive was expected any moment.

The battle so far has been an orgy of death for the Germans, for the Teutonic soldiery was flung forward in mass formation, and was mowed down by the withering machine gun and artillery fire of the British.

"Until a late hour in the night the fighting continued along the whole front from the Oise to the Sensee river," the war office reported.

"Everywhere, however, the enemy was held to his battle positions. The German tactics of advancing in mass formation offered the British opportunity for exacting a heavy toll of life and full advantage was taken of it. All reports agree that the Germans suffered exceedingly heavy losses. No serious attacks developed this morning, but they are still expected."

The whole fifty miles of front, along which the opposing armies struggled, was an inferno of noise and flame.

The ground rocked and trembled beneath the salvos of the mighty guns while the sky was ablaze with the glare of bursting shells and the flares sent up by both sides.

Into this roaring furnace dense masses of German soldiers were driven, only to be swept away by the shrapnel and machine gun bullets which sprayed the forefield by the millions.

There were hand-to-hand struggles at some points, the soldiers looking like figures from some other world as they wrestled and swayed in the smoke and turmoil, their faces hidden by grotesque gas masks.

There amidst the fitful glare of the shells and the white fire which spurted from numberless muzzles of machine guns and rifles the British soldiers fought like heroes, upholding the bravest traditions of their army.

Copenhagen, March 22.—A copy of the Berlin newspaper Taglische Rundschau, an organ of the German War Party, received here today, says that "Germany has engaged England in a decisive battle" for a general peace and that upon the outcome will depend Germany's future.

The German paper evidently refers to the German drive which opened on the western front yesterday.

London, March 22.—New and powerful attacks in the German offensive along a 50-mile front, in France, between the Scarpe river, and Vendheuil, were delivered against the British last night, but all were repulsed, the war office announced today.

Field Marshal Haig reported that the Germans were flung back and suffered heavy losses.

The fighting continued fiercely until midnight when it died down.

At the time Field Marshal Haig made his report the German assaults had ceased, but a renewal of them was expected momentarily.

Unofficial advices from the front reported a continuation of the furious struggle which promises to develop into the greatest battle in history.

Powerful thrusts were driven home against the British line all day Thursday, said advices from the front, and the Germans lost enormous numbers of men. The assaults were made in mass formation and the field of action was literally covered with dead and wounded Germans when night fell.

The German bombardment which preceded the first of the grand assaults, covered slightly more than forty miles of front, but when the infantry rolled forward the fighting zone was lengthened to about fifty miles.

Huge Austro-Hungarian Skoda guns were used by the Germans in their preliminary cannonade and so terrific was the gunfire that the detonations could be heard one hundred miles away.

This was the first time that Austro-Hungarian artillery had been used on the western front. It was reported that the Germans used tanks also.

Picked German shock troops were used in the waves of the assaulting forces, followed up by huge masses of reserves.

The attacks spread all along the British salient, lying between the Scarpe river and Vendheuil, but the strongest pressure was delivered south of Cambrai where the Germans claim to have made their gains.

This is the extreme southern end of the British front.

British wounded began arriving from the front today but the whole nation remains calm. There is a feeling of the utmost confidence that the British lines will hold and that the Germans will fling themselves in vain against the rock-bound defence of the gallant soldiers of old England.

While the Germans were pounding the British front they kept up powerful presure against the French and the violent bombardments between Rheims and the Meuse river indicated that a thrust might be delivered in Champagne at the same time that the Germans are on the offensive against the British.

In fact, the whole western front is seething with battle. Where the infantry forces are not at grips in their savage struggle the giant guns are thundering night and day.

The German offensive did not come as any surprise. It found the British ready, just as the French are ready to repel any drive against their lines. Not only had the Germans advertised their intentions, but secret information had been received by the Allied war council as to the very hour of the attack.

The Germans had timed their assault to begin on the first day of spring and it was carried out according to schedule. The operation was the first formidable offensive movement that the Germans had made on the western front since their drive against Verdun, which opened in February, 1916. That offensive continued until late in the summer and if the Teutons plan a drive on even a greater scale in the present instance there is no telling how many weeks and even months this campaign will last.

It was reported from Holland that the Kaiser, accompanied by Field Marshal Von Hindenberg and General Von Ludendorff, had gone to the western front to witness the opening of the offensive, but this has not been confirmed by Berlin.

Germany is evidently staking all upon her western front offensive, but if the results are no better than those of the first day's fighting it is foredoomed to failure.

Notwithstanding the intensity of the bombardment—the heaviest ever known in history—and the terrific nature of the infantry assaults, Field Marshal Haig reports that the Germans nowhere attained their objectives.

The field gray hordes were flung forward with the utmost recklessness and with absolutely no regard for human life. They were favored by wind from the east which carried off the fumes of their poisonous gas shells and by a smoke screen which had been projected from their trenches, but were met by such a storm of machine gun bullets and shells that they were sent reeling back when they tried to break into the English positions.

There was bloody fighting west of St. Quentin, where the Germans tried to break the Britons' grip on their positions along the Somme river. This struggle was duplicated farther north all along the front west of Cambrai, especially on the Arras-Cambrai road. The German losses in those sectors were tremendous.

The scene of the struggle has witnessed some of the hardest fighting of the present war. It was upon this terrain that the British launched their great Somme offensive in the spring of 1916, when the English bombardment attained a tensity unknown up to that time.

It was also in that district that the German retreat occurred in 1917 when the Teutons evacuated more than 1,200 square miles of French scil.

It was the scene, also, of the great Arras offensive and the battle at Cambrai last year when the British drove forward in a surprise assault, all but capturing the German stronghold of Cambrai. Later the Germans succeeded in winning back the greater part of the ground they had lost.

Auto Truck Ran Away.

Thursday afternoon a large auto truck from Newark, N. J., got away from the driver on the Sleightsburgh hill and ran away down the hill crashing into a wagon standing in front of Sleight's store near the ferry and also into the store building. The wagon was damaged, but fortunately no one was injured.

FIGHTING ON ITALIAN FRONT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rome, March 22.—Fighting has broken out along the entire Italian battle front, the war office announced today.

Along the Piave river there are violet cannonades.

The flare up of fighting in Italy, together with the growing intensity of the artillery fire along the Piave river, may have considerable significance. The view has been expressed that Germany might undertake an offensive against the Italians while making a thrust against the allies on the western front.

The German drive on the western front began yesterday and apparently the fighting activity on the Italian line began to increase at the same time.

Whether or not Germany really intends a blow against Italy cannot be foretold at this time but the next 48 hours should show whether or not Germany began an offensive on the western front to cloak a new drive against the Italians.

BOOKS NEEDED IN MILITARY HOSPITALS

The camp libraries have received many demands for books about the war from soldiers who are preparing to go "over there." But for the wounded men in the hospitals, books that take the mind off the war are frequently prescribed by physicians. So no matter what kind of a book you give, so long as it is a good book, it will fill in somewhere.

Cheerful endings are desirable in fiction for the wounded. A British nurse tells of a serial story that had been read by two of her patients, one of who was depressed for a whole day because the heroine died. "I wish, sister, I had never read it," he explained. "I got to like that girl and if I could have found one something the same when I got out and about again, I should have married her if she would have had me."

As we all know, our own boys are not going to be immune from wounds and shell shock, trench feet, and fever. If you wish to help them in their weary hospital days and in their convalescence, you can reach them best through the medium of some good book.

Give your favorite author; the novel that interested you so much when you were on your vacation last summer; the volume of poems with a meaning and a message for you. We can't all be Red Cross nurses but we can help the wounded by sending bright, cheerful books to them. The public library will see that they get them.

Before County Judge Jenkins.

The matter of the general assignment of Daniel V. Bryan to Joseph Bushoushall and John R. DeVany for the benefit of creditors was taken up Thursday before County Judge Jenkins and adjourned until April 1. John R. De Vany appeared in person. The Union and Pacific Tea Company, creditors, was represented by Assistant District Attorney Hasbrouck, counsel for Jacobson and Polleck; F. M. Tompkins appeared for Caddick and Company.

The Big Game To-night.

All indications point to a large crowd being present at the game of indoor baseball to be played at the armory this evening between Company M and the police department. Following the game Muller's orchestra will play for dancing. The proceeds will be donated to the Ulster County Chapter of the Red Cross. It will be an interesting game and for a worthy cause and should be well patronized.

Runaway Boys From Saugerties.

Thursday evening Officer Reardon picked up four runaway boys from Saugerties on Broadway, near Foxhall avenue. The boys were turned over to their fathers early this morning. The runaways were Douglas Robinson, Augustus Ricketson and Jerry and George Russell.

Raymond Had A Fall.

Charles M. Raymond was picked up on John street, Thursday evening by Officer Simpson. He had fallen and cut his head, Raymond was removed to Dr. Van Wagenen's office and later to the Benedictine Sanitarium.

At the meeting of the workers of the K. of C. War Fund drive Thursday evening at the K. of C. Home on Broadway the enthusiasm displayed during the previous evenings of the week was again demonstrated during the stirring and eulogistic addresses delivered at the meeting.

Kingston, N. Y.
F. B. Seeley, minister.
March 9th, 1918.

The Hon. A. J. Cook,
Kingston, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Cook:—

Through Vincent Gorman, I have just received your courteous invitation to be present at the meeting in the high school auditorium on Monday evening, when the War Work of the Knights of Columbus is to be presented to the people of Kingston. I greatly regret that a previous engagement of long standing will prevent my being present, but I beg you to say to the chairman of your campaign committee, J. M. Herbert, and to those having the work in charge, that they have my deepest interest and co-operation and may command me in any way that it is possible for me to serve them in their campaign.

The work of the Knights of Columbus together with the Y. M. C. A in providing recreational, social and spiritual centers for our boys "over there" is too well-known and too priceless in value to permit any lover of God and humanity to hesitate in making real contribution and giving hearty support to it.

Appreciating the courtesy of your invitation and praying for success in your effort.

I beg to remain,
Very cordially yours,
F. B. SEELEY.

A. T. Clearwater
Counsellor at Law
Kingston, N. Y., March 21, 1918.

My dear Joe:—

It is with great pleasure that I enclose a contribution to the Knights of Columbus fund. To me the most impressive fact in your canvass is the hearty co-operation between the two great branches of the Christian church militant. It demonstrates again the truth for which I so often have contended, that in all the great essentials Kingston is the equal of any community in the land, a condition due to the high aspirations and united efforts of Catholic and Protestant alike.

With many kind regards, and best wishes for your unbounded success, I am as ever,

Very sincerely yours,
A. T. CLEARWATER.

To Joseph M. Herbert, Esq.,
Kingston, N. Y.

CAPTAIN ROOSA NEW C. H. AGENT

Captain "Zach" Roosa of Newburgh, probably one of the best known steamboat men along the Hudson river, has been appointed the agent of the Central-Hudson Line at the office in this city, succeeding J. F. Steed, who will be transferred to another city.

Captain Roosa assumed his new duties today, getting the freight house and docks in shape for the reception of the steamer Poughkeepsie, which opens navigation between New York and this port on Monday. Captain Roosa has been in the employ of the Central-Hudson Line since 1872, and during that time has commanded about every steamer of the Central-Hudson Line.

During the past few years he has been the company's agent at Albany and Troy.

J. F. Steed, who has been capable agent of the Central-Hudson Line for a number of years, carries with him the best wishes of a host of friends. Just where he will be located is not known

FOUR MEETINGS FOR FRUIT GROWERS

The Ulster County Farm Bureau Association has made arrangements to hold a series of four meetings in the fruit section of Ulster county to discuss the best methods of controlling the apple aphis, red bug and pear psylla. Meetings are to be held as follows:

Milton—Wednesday, March 27, at 7:30 p. m., at the Community House.

Professor C. R. Crosby of the State College of Agriculture, extension specialist on insect pest control, will give an illustrated lecture on the control of above mentioned pests at all four meetings.

A general discussion and question box will follow each lecture.

EAST KINGSTON HAS "GONE OVER"

The $1,500 K. of C. War Fund assignment to St. Colman's Church, East Kingston, has been exceeded. The Italian teams, who have aggregated $125.50 of the $1,232.75 previously reported, have a much larger sum still pledged, and the children's campaign in one school in East Kingston—Public School No. 16S—of which Miss Kathryn M. O'Connor is principal, will amount to $100 or more, with a second school in East Kingston—Public School No. 6—of which Miss Phoebe Cheshire is principal, still to be heard from.

One Chance Cost $3.

Joseph A. Brady, who is an agent for a well known brand of cigar, took a chance this morning by running his advertising car on the left hand side of Broadway, near Thomas street, and letting it stand for a minute or so. He was arrested by Officer Shader and Judge Schirick imposed a fine of $3 when he was arraigned in police court.

IN THE SERVICE OF OUR COUNTRY

PRIVATE PETER M[illegible]TCHEON.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. McCutcheon of Hudson street, now "Somewhere in France."

William Glaccum of New Rochelle, N. Y., who has been connected with the United Cigar Company's store on Wall street, this city, for several years, has enlisted in the United States Naval Reserve and will begin training at Pelham Bay Park next week.

Joseph Emmick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Emmick of Lindsley avenue is now stationed at Fort Bliss. He enlisted February 20 and was sent to Fort Slocum and later to Texas. He writes that he is enjoying the best of health and likes army life. His friends may write him at the following address: "Private Joseph Emmick, 7th Cavalry, Fort Bliss, El Paso, Texas.

Miss Helen Bryce of this city has recently received word from her brother, Ed. J. Bryce, who has been in France since last August, he being one of the first Kingston young men to enlist. His many friends in this city and Newburgh may address him: Private Ed. J. Bryce, 18th Co., 5th Rgt., U. S. Marines, care of New York Postmaster. Private Bryce writes that he is in excellent health.

FLOATING ICE OFF KINGSTON POINT

Hudson River Open Between Rondout and New York—First Boat Up Monday—Towing Season Opens Later—Other River Notes.

There is now open water between Rondout and New York, and the Hudson river off Kingston Point is full of floating ice. The first boat up the river for the season will be the Poughkeepsie of the Central Hudson Line which comes through Monday. No date has been fixed as yet for the opening of the towing season. The floating ice in the river is not bothering the Transport which has no difficulty in keeping close to her schedule.

From Hudson comes the report that the ice was moving out at that point Thursday, and the danger of freshets is past.

Thursday night Frank M. Best opened the lighthouse at Hudson which is three days earlier than last year.

The ferry George H. Power made its first trip of the season between Athens and Hudson Thursday morning, experiencing little difficulty. Last year the first trip was made March 24.

Late Thursday the ice in front of Coxsackie broke up.

The Saugerties and New York Steamboat Company expect to be able to start the steamer Ida making trips between Saugerties and New York next week.

The ice this season has been the heaviest rivermen remember during the past thirty years. Thirty inches of ice was common and it was said that three feet of ice was found in a few places along the Hudson the latter part of January.

The ice has been breaking up gradually and moving out of the river without kicking up much trouble in this vicinity.

Miller Goes With Van Benschoten

A. C. Miller, the well known automobile salesman and accessory man, has accepted a position with Van's Garage of this city, located at Nos. 529-531 Broadway. John Van Benschoten, proprietor of this garage has put in a very up-to-date accessory store, which Mr. Miller will have charge of. In addition to this Mr. Van Benschoten has the agency for the Dodge, Chalmers, Peerless, Marmon, Nash and Studebaker pleasure cars; also Nash trucks and Smith-Form-A-Trucks. J. D. Schenck is salesmanager of the company.

Some One Had Chicken Dinner.

Wednesday night person or persons unknown entered the chicken coop of Herbert Hall, 130 Highland avenue, and helped themselves to five nice fat hens.

HURRICANE OF BATTLE BEATS AGAINST BRITISH IN FRANCE

Germans in Mass Formation Mowed Down by Machine Gun Fire Without Making Any Real Headway---Fighting Breaks Out on Italian Front---"Decisive Battle" Says Berlin Paper.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, March 22.—A hurricane of battle, in which the Germans suffered terrific losses, raged in the darkness of last night along fifty miles of the British front in France from the Sensee river, opposite Arras, to the Oise river south of St. Quentin.

At every point the Germans were held to their battle positions, the war office announced today.

After midnight a comparative lull settled down upon the blood-soaked field, but Field Marshal Haig reported this morning that a renewal of the German drive was expected any moment.

The battle so far has been an orgy of death for the Germans, for the Teutonic soldiery was flung forward in mass formation, and was mowed down by the withering machine gun and artillery fire of the British.

"Until a late hour in the night the fighting continued along the whole front from the Oise to the Sensee river," the war office reported.

"Everywhere, however, the enemy was held to his battle positions. The German tactics of advancing in mass formation offered the British opportunity for exacting a heavy toll of life and full advantage was taken of it. All reports agree that the Germans suffered exceedingly heavy losses. No serious attacks developed this morning, but they are still expected."

The whole fifty miles of front along which the opposing armies struggled, was an inferno of noise and flame.

The ground rocked and trembled beneath the salvos of the mighty guns while the sky was ablaze with the glare of bursting shells and the flares sent up by both sides.

Into this roaring furnace dense masses of German soldiers were driven, only to be swept away by the shrapnel and machine gun bullets which sprayed the forefield by the millions.

There were hand-to-hand struggles at some points, the soldiers looking like figures from some other world as they wrestled and swayed in the smoke and turmoil, their faces hidden by grotesque gas masks.

There amidst the fitful glare of the shells and the white fire which spurted from numberless muzzles of machine guns and rifles the British soldiers fought like heroes, upholding the bravest traditions of their army.

Copenhagen, March 22.—A copy of the Berlin newspaper Taglische Rundschau, an organ of the German War Party, received here today, says that "Germany has engaged England in a decisive battle" for a general peace and that upon the outcome will depend Germany's future.

The German paper evidently refers to the German drive which opened on the western front yesterday.

London, March 22.—New and powerful attacks in the German offensive along a 50-mile front, in France, between the Scarpe river, and Vendheuil, were delivered against the British last night, but all were repulsed, the war office announced today.

Field Marshal Haig reported that the Germans were flung back and suffered heavy losses.

The fighting continued fiercely until midnight when it died down.

At the time Field Marshal Haig made his report the German assaults had ceased, but a renewal of them was expected momentarily.

Unofficial advices from the front reported a continuation of the furious struggle which promises to develop into the greatest battle in history.

Powerful thrusts were driven home against the British line all day Thursday, said advices from the front, and the Germans lost enormous numbers of men. The assaults were made in mass formation and the field of action was literally covered with dead and wounded Germans when night fell.

The German bombardment which preceded the first of the grand assaults, covered slightly more than forty miles of front, but when the infantry rolled forward the fighting zone was lengthened to about fifty miles.

Huge Austro-Hungarian Skoda guns were used by the Germans in their preliminary cannonade and so terrific was the gunfire that the detonations could be heard one hundred miles away.

This was the first time that Austro-Hungarian artillery had been used on the western front. It was reported that the Germans used tanks also.

Picked German shock troops were used in the waves of the assaulting forces, followed up by huge masses of reserves.

The attacks spread all along the British salient, lying between the Scarpe river and Vendheuil, but the strongest pressure was delivered south of Cambrai where the Germans claim to have made their gains.

British wounded began arriving from the front today but the whole nation remains calm. There is a feeling of the utmost confidence that the British lines will hold and that the Germans will fling themselves in vain against the rock-bound defence of the gallant soldiers of old England.

While the Germans were pounding the British front they kept up powerful presure against the French and the violent bombardments between Rheims and the Meuse river indicated that a thrust might be delivered in Champagne at the same time that the Germans are on the offensive against the British.

In fact, the whole western front is seething with battle. Where the infantry forces are not at grips in their savage struggle the giant guns are thundering night and day.

The German offensive did not come as any surprise. It found the British ready, just as the French are ready to repel any drive against their lines. Not only had the Germans advertised their intentions, but secret information had been received by the Allied war council as to the very hour of the attack.

The Germans had timed their assault to begin on the first day of spring and it was carried out according to schedule. The operation was the first formidable offensive movement that the Germans had made on the western front since last year when the British drove forward in a surprise assault, all but capturing the German stronghold of Cambrai. Later the Germans succeeded in winning back the greater part of the ground they had lost.

Auto Truck Ran Away.

Thursday afternoon a large auto truck from Newark, N. J., got away from the driver on the Sleightsburgh hill and ran away down the hill crashing into a wagon standing in front of Sleight's store near the ferry and also into the store building. The wagon was damaged, but fortunately no one was injured.

FIGHTING ON ITALIAN FRONT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rome, March 22.—Fighting has broken out along the entire Italian battle front, the war office announced today.

Along the Piave river there are violet cannonades.

The flare up of fighting in Italy, together with the growing intensity of the artillery fire along the Piave river, may have considerable significance. The view has been expressed that Germany might undertake an offensive against the Italians while making a thrust against the allies on the western front.

Whether or not Germany really intends a blow against Italy cannot be foretold at this time but the next 48 hours should show whether or not Germany began an offensive on the western front to cloak a new drive against the Italians.

BOOKS NEEDED IN MILITARY HOSPITALS

The camp libraries have received many demands for books about the war from soldiers who are preparing to go "over there." But for the wounded men in the hospitals, books that take the mind off the war are frequently prescribed by physicians. So no matter what kind of a book you give, so long as it is a good book, it will fill in somewhere.

Cheerful endings are desirable in fiction for the wounded. A British nurse tells of a serial story that had been read by two of her patients, one of who was depressed for a whole day because the heroine died. "I wish, sister, I had never read it," he explained, "I got to like that girl and if I could have found one something the same when I got out and about again, I should have married her if she would have had me."

As we all know, our own boys are not going to be immune from wounds and shell shock, trench feet, and fever. If you wish to help them in their weary hospital days and in their convalescence, you can reach them best through the medium of some good book.

Give your favorite author; the novel that interested you so much when you were on your vacation last summer; the volume of poems with a meaning and a message for you. We can't all be Red Cross nurses but we can help the wounded by sending bright, cheerful books to them. The public library will see that they get them.

Before County Judge Jenkins.

The matter of the general assignment of Daniel V. Bryan to Joseph Bushonshall and John R. DeVany for the benefit of creditors was taken up Thursday before County Judge Jenkins and adjourned until April 1. John R. De Vany appeared in person. The Union and Pacific Tea Company, creditors, was represented by Assistant District Attorney Hasbrouck, counsel for Jacobson and Polleck; F. M. Tompkins appeared for Caddick and Company.

The Big Game To-night.

All indications point to a large crowd being present at the game of indoor baseball to be played at the armory this evening between Company M and the police department. Following the game Muller's orchestra will play for dancing. The proceeds will be donated to the Ulster County Chapter of the Red Cross. It will be an interesting game and for a worthy cause and should be well patronized.

Runaway Boys From Saugerties.

Thursday evening Officer Reardon picked up four runaway boys from Saugerties on Broadway, near Foxhall avenue. The boys were turned over to their fathers early this morning. The runaways were Douglas Robinson, Augustus Pocketson and Jerry and George Russell.

Raymond Had A Fall.

Charles M. Raymond was picked up on John street, Thursday evening by Officer Simpson. He had fallen and cut his head. Raymond was removed to Dr. Van Wagenen's office and later to the Benedictine Sanitarium.

"With the Man on the Can"

It Took Years To Find Cosmolac

There was a big demand for a clear, transparent varnish that would resist sunshine, snow, rain, hot and cold soapy water, etc. This perfect varnish must not crack, scratch nor bruise white. It must be as strong as an extremely thin sheet of steel—as clear as plate glass—to protect and preserve as well as beautify.

Eventually Cosmolac was discovered by one of the oldest paint houses in the country.

Cosmolac is a tough, elastic finish for any surface requiring varnish either indoors or out. It is perfectly transparent and does not affect the color of undercoats, wood grains, lettering, striping, or any decoration.

Painless Dentistry

The difference between painless and painful dentistry depends upon the carefulness and skillfulness of the operator. With good instruments, fresh medicines, local anaesthetics and nitrous oxide gas a careful and skillful dentist can perform all operations painlessly, even to the extraction of teeth.

Painless methods, earnest endeavor and reasonable prices have in thirty years, made the Cady Dental Corporation the largest dental organization in New York state.

VICTORY MENUS.

These menus, planned to conserve time, labor and money, and to save the foods that are scarce and use those of which there is an abundance, are Victory Menus in more senses than one. They are prepared by the Department of Home Economics of the State College of Agriculture and endorsed by the New York State Food Commission.

Saturday—Porkless Day.

*These dishes may be omitted and the meal still be balanced.)

While Americans are asked to eat more beans, it is requested that they favor the darker varieties, such as pinto, kidney or soy beans, and reserve the white or navy beans for the army and navy. Not that there is any difference in the food value of these varieties, but the boys who have gone to war seem to prefer the lighter colored bean and it is but right that the public for whom they are fighting should give them what they want.

Bean Souffle.

1 pint hot boiling bean pulp, 1 or 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon onion juice, 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley.

Beat the yolk of the eggs and add to them the other ingredients. Fold in the well beaten whites of the eggs. Heap the mixture lightly in a baking dish and bake in a slow oven for about 20 minutes or until it is set. Serve immediately.

Fish Hash.

Take equal parts of cold flaked fish and boiled potatoes finely chopped. Season with salt and pepper. Melt enough butter in a pan to moisten fish and potatoes. Put in the fish and potatoes, stir until heated, then cook until well browned underneath, fold and serve.

Apple Rings.

Apple rings are made by cooking unpeeled apples, sliced one-half inch thick, in corn syrup until they are transparent. The corn syrup may be diluted 1-3 with water. Serve the rings with cream.

Recipes for any of the dishes in these menus which cannot be found in cook books, may be had by writing to the Department of Home Economics, State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

JUST A DUB, BUT--

He Had at Least One Good Deed to His Credit.

As standards are on this earth he had not amounted to much.

He had lived, laughed, loved, sinned and died in the common way of all. He had made a few friends, and a few enemies, but he had come and passed as one of the many. His had been common toil and he had done it in the ordinary way.

And so when his soul at last stood before the Great White Gate there was no stir among the saints to receive it.

"What have you to say for yourself?" said St. Peter, sternly, but not unkindly.

"Nothing," replied the soul, timidly.

"Nothing!" exclaimed St. Peter. "Did you never get your name in the papers?"

"Never. I was never considered very clever down there."

"Oh. Didn't make fine speeches then?"

"No. I couldn't talk on my feet."

"I see. Didn't go to church very often either, did you?"

"No. I was often very tired and on Sundays I slept late in the mornings and played with the kiddies the rest of the day."

"You died in your bed, while thousands of your fellowmen died on the battlefield, fighting for their country?"

"Yes. When the war came I was beyond the age of enlistment."

"Well, can't you think of one thing that you did that might recommend you for admission here?"

"I'm afraid not. All my life I was just a dub."

"Just a dub, eh?"

"Yes. Never did shine at anything. Just a plodder, trying hard all the time to get somewhere, but never actually arriving. And yet—"

"Yet what,"

"If you will permit me to say it, during the great war down there I didn't force a committee to spend two or three hours trying to convince me that I ought to buy Liberty bonds. I couldn't fight; couldn't be a general or a captain; I didn't know enough to fill a government job, but I did know it was every man's duty to back his country to the limit, and I bought all the Liberty bonds I could, without an argument."

"Fine," said St. Peter enthusiastically, "come right on in. Did you notice a crowd of fine-looking, high-stepping souls going down as you came up?"

"Yes."

"Well that was a bunch of loud-talking rich spirits who delayed the end of the war a year because they wouldn't buy Liberty bonds until they were convinced that their purchases were absolutely necessary. They're going to get a taste of trench life under Old Satan in the financial slacker's department."

Are Aviators Born?

"There was a time when it was held that a man must be especially born for aeronautic duties," writes Henry Woodhouse, vice president of the Aerial League of America, in Everybody's.

"Experience had brought out the fact that the average young man can make an excellent aviator. Captain Guynemer, Major Bishop, Captain William Thaw, Captain Ball of the Lafayette escadrille, and practically all the famous aviators were not men who impressed anybody with being different from other young men.

"Of the thousands of allied aviators there are probably not 500 men who had seen more than a few months of military service before joining the air service. Most of them had never seen any military service.

"In planning an organization for the selection and training of aviators, the aircraft board and signal corps of the United States have had to prepare to deal entirely with men who had never seen military service, as other countries have done."

Safest Place.

We were calling at a home in East Cleveland, not more than a hundred yards from where the Nickel Plate tracks cross Superior. As we rang the bell we noticed something that gave us a shudder of apprehension, and when our hostess answered the door we gave vent to our feelings at once.

"Mrs. Emdash," we said, "do you know where your children are playing?"

"No," she gasped, paling a little with alarm. "Where are they?"

"Up there on the railroad tracks!" we told her.

She looked relieved.

"Oh," she said, "I was afraid they were playing in the street. I am so afraid of the automobiles. Won't you come in—I'll call Mr. Emdash."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TNT Poison Through Skin.

Trinitrotoluene poisoning is a new disease in America, but one that has attracted much attention since our factories began making munitions in large quantities. There is some dispute how the TNT poisons, but the Medical Record says the weight of evidence is in favor of its absorption through the skin, though inhaling the fumes may be responsible to some extent.

CAMP LIBRARIES HELP WIN THE WAR

"Camp library service has been established for just one purpose," said Burton E Stevenson, at Camp Sherman recently, "that is to help win the war, and there are three ways in which it can help: First, by helping to maintain the morale of the men by providing them with interesting and entertaining reading matter to help tide over the moments of loneliness and depression which comes to everyone; second, by helping to educate them as to the causes and purposes of the war, and make them realize that they are not fighting Frances fight, England's fight, or Italy's fight, but America's fight—that it is not Belgium or France or England that Germany is seeking to destroy, but the ideals and principles which form the very foundation stones of this Republic; and third, by providing the men with special technical books along their several lines and so making them better and more efficient soldiers."

Good reading has helped to keep many a soldier up to his highest level; it has aided in the recovery of many a wounded man. It has helped to keep him cheerful, and to send back to the firing line with renewed determination to win or die bravely in the attempt.

British soldiers returning home have said that but for the solace of reading, they would indeed have been badly off for recreation and amusement in the gloomy dugout, in the trenches, and the huts which afforded them some sort of shelter. There, often by the light of a candle stuck in a bottle, or upon a piece of wood with a nail driven through it, the war is happily driven from the mind by the "magic carpet" of some book of travel or romance.

How about the book that was given to you last Christmas? One way of keeping the spirit of Christmas in your heart is to pass on the book to some soldier. He needs it more than you do.

TEACHING WOMEN USE OF BALLOT

There was a goodly number of representative women at the chapel of the First Dutch church Tuesday evening, when the first session of the School of Instruction in the use of the ballot, under the supervision of the Federation of Women's Clubs was held. The first speaker of the evening was Alfred D. Van Buren whose conciseness, clarity and honesty made a profound impression on all present. Mr Van Buren said he was not going to attempt to do what he had no right to do, tell anybody "how to vote," but he did hope to impress his hearers with the seriousness of their new privilege and responsibility in voting. He also intended trying to make plain the use of the ballot, the symbol of American freedom and liberty. And he warned his hearers that the ballot was infinitely more than a "scrap of paper." The speaker considered it an inopportune time for the women of the state to first exercise their privilege as voters, when there was so much that is rotten and tricky in our politics, and voiced the sentiment that it was a shame that our men had not to some extent at least, cleared up the politics of the state before this event. He told the women, that through their use of the ballot they would preserve their own standards in the community. First of all the women of our city as well as state must be made to realize their responsibility in this matter, whether it has been or their choosing or not. Mr. Van Buren then surprised many of his hearers by stating that there about 9,500 women in the city of Kingston; 2,500 more woman than men. He asked his audience to think what could be accomplished with such a majority, and told them there was nothing they could not do politically if properly organized.

Then the speaker gave definite instructions as to registering, making it plain that every woman must register in order to be able to vote. He further called attention to the fact that with their first opportunity to vote would come the issue of a big moral question.

Having explained the matter of registering, Mr. Van Buren went into detail as to the actual voting on the election day, and his portrayal of what might be expected to be encountered at the polling places, was a word picture that would have done credit to Dickens.

Then the question of the coming special election was taken up, and the women were warned that they must register on April 5th, or 6th, if they wished to vote on this great moral issue of whether or not the city shall have liquor traffic. This election, it was pointed out, would not be for the choosing of officials but for the deciding of this great moral problem. Continuing, Mr. Van Buren showed the necessity of arousing the interest and conscience of all of the 9,500 women of our city in this matter of their responsibility as voters, and explained that this could be properly done only through an organization of the women of the community. After again urging, emphatically upon his hearers, the need of realizing their responsibility as voters, whether they would or not, Mr Van Buren left the matter of organization to Mr. Thornberry who was the next speaker.

Mr Thornberry made clear, what every Federation woman realized, that today no movement of any import can be successfully carried through without organized effort. While each one of the 9,500 women of the city should express her individuality through her use of the ballot, to leave the matter open, without carefully seeing to it that every such woman was aroused to the importance of the matter, would avail little for the right as any might see it. In order to properly initiate the feminine vote in the city, it would be necessary to appoint a chairman; a secretary, and an executive committee, small enough to be wieldy and large enough to have the interests of the whole community at heart as the official board of the organization. This coming special election would be one of deepest concern to our women. And the speaker said that no time should be lost in the forming of the organization of the women of the city, that in the short time remaining before the two registration days, every woman in the city could be interested in the matter. It had been arranged that there would be held a second meeting similar to the one in progress, on Friday evening of this week at the Rondout Presbyterian church, for the special purpose of forming such an organization, and it was asked that representatives from Tuesday evening's audience be appointed to go to this second meeting.

On motion of Mrs. W. N. Fessenden, it was voted that the audience as a whole go to the Friday evening meeting at the Rondout Presbyterian church to help in the forming of such organization, and in the mean time, all women present Tuesday evening were urged to speak to as many other women about the matter as they could. The meeting then adjourned.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

2001—A Smart Style for Home or Porch Wear.

Ladies' House Dress, with or without back yoke, and with sleeve in either of two lengths.

Gray and white striped seersucker is here shown. The waist has gathered fulness beneath a square yoke, which may be omitted. The sleeve, in wrist length, is finished with a band cuff. In shorter length, a neat, pointed cuff forms a suitable trimming. The skirt has roomy pockets and is a three-piece model. The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. It requires 6¾ yards of 36-inch material for a 36-inch size. The skirt measures about 3 yards at the foot.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

It would be a great accommodation to D. G. Atkins when the teachers make their report, to give the name of the school district and the number of pupils in each school, this would save a great deal of correspondence. Mr. Atkins would also consider it a favor if the teachers who reside in the city would call at his office Saturdays, so he could deliver the certificates, banners and buttons to them.

SOCKS ARE NEEDED BY THE SOLDIERS

To clear up the misunderstanding which seems to exist concerning the need for knitted socks among the men of our army and navy, Ethan Allen, manager of the Atlantic Division of the American Red Cross, announced yesterday that there was not the slightest danger of an overproduction.

So many conflicting statements have come from sources outside the Red Cross to the effect that our soldiers were being supplied with socks which they would never be able to wear that Mr. Allen called attention to the fact that the life of a pair of socks in the trenches is about three days.

"There is little likelihood," said Mr. Allen, "that more socks will be knitted for the soldiers than will be needed by them."

Brontides.

Mystery still attaches to certain explosive sounds, heard in various parts of the world and known to science as "brontides." On the coast of Belgium these sounds seem to come from the sea, and are called locally "mistipiefers." In the Ganges delta of India, similar sounds are called "Barisal guns." Brontides are well known in some parts of Italy, where they bear a great variety of names. In Haiti a sound of this character is known as the "gouffre," while in parts of Australia it is called the "desert sound." Brontides mostly take the form of muffled detonations, of indefinite direction. Probably they are of subterranean origin. Studies of eccentricities in the transmission of sound through the atmosphere lead to the conclusion that some of the sounds hitherto reported as brontides were really due to cannonading or blasting.—Popular Science Monthly.

The KITCHEN CABINET

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

Simple foods, well cooked, are the order of the day. For an economical meatless dish try the following: Soak over night one pint of kidney beans, boil until tender. Fry three chopped onions in a tablespoonful of fat until brown, then add the beans and half a can of tomatoes with a quarter of a pound of macaroni broken into bits. Simmer until the macaroni is tender; season well and serve.

Honey Cookies.—Heat a cupful of strained honey, add a cupful of sugar, three-quarters of a cupful of milk, a quarter of a cupful of shortening. After boiling, cool and add five and a half cupfuls of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of salt and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder; add to the first mixture with the yolks of three eggs well beaten. Add a cupful of chopped nut meats, a teaspoonful of almond extract. Roll thin, cut and bake in a hot oven.

Braised Chicken.—Melt a teaspoonful of butter or butter substitute in a kettle, and when hot put the chicken into the kettle, turning it until all sides are well browned. Add one onion and one carrot, finely chopped and fried in butter until brown, season well and add boiling water to half cover the chicken, then cover and cook slowly until tender. A half cupful of macaroni may be added to the broth and cooked with the chicken. When serving put the chicken on a hot platter with the macaroni around it, with the gravy poured over all.

Soy Bean Loaf.—Wash a pound of soy beans, cover with cold water and let soak 24 hours, then put on to cook with an onion stuck with two cloves, a little salt, bay leaf and a half teaspoonful of thyme tied in a muslin cloth. Cover and cook gently until the beans are tender. When cooked put them through a meat chopper, season with salt and pepper, a half cupful of tomato catsup and two canned pimentoes, with the whites of two hard-cooked eggs, chopped fine. Form into a loaf, brush over with egg and roll in bread crumbs. Bake three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven. Garnish with parsley when serving.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MARCH 22, 1918.

It certainly is a shock to moral sensibility to find the foremost advocate of what he pronounces to be a great moral issue announcing that Speaker Sweet of the Assembly "can now put ratification over," if he will quit playing politics. Dishonest deals invariably are said to have been "put over," because the term implies undue advantage. Is it necessary to employ such means to "put over" a great moral issue as the Rev. William H. Anderson seems to imply by his language in reference to pending Prohibition legislation in the Assembly? Manners have changed in nineteen hundred years; new issues have arisen, but moral principle is the same now as then, because right is changeless. The only "Perfect Man" the world has known, never found it necessary to "put over" the principles he taught, which is one reason why He is remembered when others are forgotten.

TOO MUCH HOT AIR.

The third Liberty Loan will be launched April sixth, the first anniversary of the United States' entrance into war, and if the suggestions of Mayor Cornelius Burns, President of the State Conference of Mayors, are carried out there will be a big demonstration in every city which will include:

1. Assembling of people in Armories at 11 a. m. to hear reading of proclamation, speeches by the respective Mayors and patriotic songs by school children.

2. Church bells and factory whistles to be sounded at noon.

3. Street parade of Liberty Loan Committees, school children and civic organizations in afternoon.

The first anniversary of our country's entrance into war finds us with insufficient supplies for our forces abroad and the echo still sounding of unkind comments against National Fuel Administrator Garfield for having issued Fuelless Mondays orders last winter by whose operation factories were compelled to shut down. The demand from military sources everywhere is for America to "speed up" industries and by furnishing ample supplies promptly to shorten the war.

Yet in the face of this plea, it is suggested that every city in New York State shall lessen production still more by stopping work to listen to speeches and watch a parade. Parades and hot air emanations of men anxious to hear themselves talk do not win wars. Parades of soldiers excite patriotic fervor and bring home the realities of war, but other parades are not wanted. The men who will be asked to subscribe to Liberty Bonds are asked to lose a day's wages which might go toward buying bonds. Why not have a holiday every day while the Liberty Loan campaign lasts? Thing of the glorious help it would be in producing supplies which our soldiers are asking for.

GENTLE TINKLES.

Perhaps State Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson was in jest when he sponsored the Senate bill which would require all cats to wear a bell and permit the killing of all cats found unbelled or caught in the act of killing a bird, but he has the satisfaction of knowing that the public takes a deep interest in the measure and has written both in commendation and condemnation. The bill applies equally to the pet house-cat which wears a pink ribbon bow as to the hungry feline which spends its time near the neighbors' garbage can. No cat is immune, which is proper because favoritism shown to the cat family might by degrees be extended to other classes of living beings, including man. The majority of people who favor the bill are those whose slumber has been disturbed by rat concerts on the back fence. Belling the cats won't break up the concert, however, and the faithful brick or bootjack will continue to be employed for that purpose. If the bells have a dulcet, soothing tone, their gentle tinkle will lessen the inharmonious caterwauling of the unmusically inclined cat, and in many instances should prove a desirable feature. Music records for the talking machine or player piano are always in favor if they have an accompaniment of chimes, and church soloists obtain most effective results from the church chimes. Cats wearing bells will warn birds of their danger, but bird-catching is not the chief end and aim in life of any cat which much prefers the succulent mice and rats, which infest every neighborhood occasionally and some neighborhoods continually. "Feed your cats and they catch no birds," wrote one cat-owner. "I had twenty-nine cats and kittens to protect my chickens from sparrows and rats and they never touched a chick or bird during the year I was in the poultry business." "You ought to live on rats and have them run over your bed every night to amuse you," wrote one correspondent. If cats are belled, it might be a good plan also to bell the rats.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

"There's one thing this war has done," "What's that?" "Taught knitting to more women than ever before handled needles."—Detroit Free Press.

"Me name is Mcginness," announced Pat, "and Oi'm ready to foight as long as there's breath left in me body." "Yis," hissed Mike, "that's phwat you Mcginnesses foight with."—Life.

"So in the new play you have the part of a decayed gentleman. That's just the role for you, my boy." "Why do you think so?" "Because you're a rotten actor."—Boston Transcript.

"Did I understand you to say that man takes a lively interest in the advancement of art?" "Yes." "What is he—an artist or a collector?" "Neither. He's the auctioneer."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

"Do you tend your own furnace?" "No," replied Mr. Crosslots. "I'm not selfish. If we get in enough fuel to start a little blaze, I let the whole family gather around and enjoy it with me."—Washington Star.

A Nasal Calamity.

Between Edinburgh and Carlisle a brawny, middle-aged Scotsman entered a train one day. His Highland garb, and the fact that he took snuff freely from a large box and offered it to others to "help their ain sels," attracted the attention of the other occupants of the compartment.

At Newcastle an Englishman whom nature had gifted with an extremely large nose, joined the other travelers. He seated himself opposite the Scot, who beamed with pleasure and at once offered his snuffbox. When the Englishman declined it, the astonished Scot said:

"Dinna ye snuff?"

"No," answered the Saxon.

As He Saw It.

The average foreigner can rarely comprehend the geographical area of the United States, as was quite fully illustrated by the Englishman and his valet, who had been traveling due west from Boston for five days. At the end of the fifth day master and servant were seated in the smoking car, and it was observed that the man was gazing steadily and thoughtfully out of the window. Finally his companion became curious. "William," said he, "of what are you thinking?"

"I was just thinking, sir, about the discovery of Hamerica," replied the valet. "Columbus didn't do such a wonderful thing, after all, when he found this country, did he, now, sir? Hafter all's said an' done, 'ow could 'e 'elp it."—Everybody's Magazine.

An Uncrowded Industry.

Pat had just arrived from Ireland when Mike, who had been in America for some years, spied him.

"I've come over," answered Pat, "to try if I can make an honest living."

"Begorra, Mike, me boy, that's dead aisy over here for it's little competition you have in this country."—The Lamb.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

Again that eventful date has arrived and passed when the students of the high school are made either sad or happy by the marks on their report cards. It is no easy matter to receive eighty in every subject for many times students are apt in mathematics and science, but dull in English and the foreign languages or just the opposite, apt in English and the foreign languages. To receive mark all eighty-five or above is extremely good work, and to receive 90 or above in every subject is extraordinarily good. Still that list of students who have received ninety or above has not changed in numbers and the other lists have remained almost as high in numbers. The students who have worked hard enough to receive these marks are as follows:

Classification of pupils who are doing very satsifactory work. The grades are taken from the recent report cards.

Midgets Defeat Juniors 41 to 7.

Tuesday afternoon immediately after school a large crowd of high school students witnessed in the high school gymnasium a basket ball game that had been previously proclaimed y the juniors as theirs but the Midgets came, saw and conquered. They avenged in every way the wrongs of the Seniors by beating the Juniors by far greater score than they defeated the Seniors. The game was to easy a victory for the Midgets to be called exciting although the Midgets amused the spectators by scrambling all over the Juniors, thereby causing the Juniors to leave the floor in anything but a sweet disposition. The lion Zeh, was no match for Kirchner. His roars went over the top of Kirchner's head, and were of no avail. To make a long story short the Midgets defeated the Juniors so badly that they quite crushed their proud spirit. The line-ups were as follows:

Power of the Spirit in Deafness.

The central thought which comes from my experience with deafness is that remedy—recompense. There, as elsewhere, is the natural law—that nature seeks always to balance itself. The only irreparable disaster in deafness is that one which would despoil the spirit—the will; and here again, as was shown in depression, it is within the personality, within the bounds and terms of our own understanding, that exist the laws which reharmonize the discordant condition and reinvest the mind with its conscious power to dominate the forces and events of life. —Margaret Baldwin, in Atlantic.

New Material for Paper Pulp.

Experiments in the use of lalang grass for paper pulp have been carried out in Australia. There are millions of tons of lalang grass growing in Queensland. It produces three crops a year, and is considered a curse to the country. It resembles esparto grass and, when dried, yields as high as 60 per cent of first-class paper-making pulp.

NEW SPRING STYLE

Coat and Skirt, an Evidence of Grace and Simplicity.

Women—all women—still want to look attractive and to make the best of themselves, but there is to be no extravagance, either in actual expenditure or in general style. And just here, observes a prominent fashion authority, the good sense of our Parisian dressmakers makes itself felt. The new spring styles are models of grace and simple charm, in fact, many of them are so very simple in outline that any clever girl could copy them, perfectly, with the aid of a needlewoman or "the little dressmaker round the corner."

For example, take the charming model of this spring coat and skirt. It is a Worth model made of dull blue oatmeal cloth with many rows of machine-stitching done in thick cherry-red silk on the hem of the skirt and also on the coat. At the waist there is a smart girdle made of cherry-red silk cord, finished off with long tassels. This was a simple little costume intended for morning wear, and it could be copied in any color and any soft material. If desired the machine stitching could match the dress material, the girdle, of course, following suit. A particularly smart spring suit might be made from this model, in navy monks' cloth with a machine stitching in bordeaux-red, with girdle to match. Or the costume would look very elegant and attractive in black camel's hair cloth, with b ck silk stitchings and a printed silk ing for the coat.

It was expressed in cherry-red felt and by way of trimming there was a fan-shaped ornament made of dark blue horse-hair jutting out from the narrow brim at the back. This hat had a notably large crown and quite a narrow brim. This is an idea which seems certain of success. Hats of this order must be pulled well down on the head, covering the hair except at the sides. On young and pretty girls these hats are exceedingly attractive, but they are not for every one.

WOOL COAT, YARN TRIMMING

Apparently we all have grown so used to knitting that we just cannot stop doing it. At least, one is justified in such an inference from the number of knitted accessories and the forms of knitted trimming one sees nowadays in the shops. To begin with, the vogue of the knitted wool sweater is by no means finished. Women stop in their war work of making socks and mufflers now and then to knit a sweater for themselves of some gay yarn.

Perhaps the newest thing is the woolen coat with trimmings of knitted yarn. Some of these coats are very smart. They are expensive, too, for, of course, the knitted work is hand done, and they also are a novelty. One of a dark, dull green cloth shows sleeves, pockets and a waistcoat front of knitted green worsted. Others have only collar, cuffs and belt or collar, cuffs and pockets of the worsted work, and a good many have vests or waistcoats of it.

We Wonder

"Here's a question I'd like to propound," remarked the Observer of Events and Things; "Does a bowlegged soldier become knock-kneed when he faces the enemy for the first time?"

At the meeting of the workers of the K. of C. War Fund drive Thursday evening at the K. of C. Home on Broadway the enthusiasm displayed during the previous evenings of the week was again demonstrated during the stirring and eulogistic addresses delivered at the meeting.

Harry P. Dodge led the audience in the rendition of "America," at the opening and "The Star Spangled Banner" at the close. While the luncheon was being served and in the interval between the speakers, it was under Mr. Dodge's able leadership that the assemblage gave vent to their feelings in singing "Over There," "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and "Where Do We Go From Here."

After the Rev. Father Briody invoked divine blessing, just before those present were seated at the table, Martin Daly sang several solos.

The first speaker of the evening was the Hon. William H. Grogan, who paid a great tribute to the Rev. Dr. Baragwanath as being one of the most finished and gifted orators that this city has ever had, as his address on Wednesday evening proved. Judge Hasbrouck and the Rev. Dr. Cady also came in for their just share of the eloquence of the previous evening's meeting. Mr. Grogan said that the Jew, the Protestant and the Catholic have broken bread together during the week and have given their talents and best efforts in a common cause and the accomplishment of a universal brotherhood is the result, as the magnificent achievement of the present week discloses. The Knights of Columbus and the Catholics are duty bound, the speaker went on to say, to assist in the raising of any fund started and join hands with the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and any other organization in the solicitation of funds, and it would be their pleasure to take their just burden of the work.

The next speaker was County Judge James Jenkins, who said he belonged to the four minute class and was, therefore, not very fast. He believed that this was the best organized campaign ever held in this city, and the plans were so carefully laid by the leaders that the followers had experienced very little difficulty in the gathering of the funds, so thoroughly was the team work laid out before hand that he thought an ideal plan had at last been conceived. The judge told of the two plans of ruling men, one was by doing good and the other was by doing ill. The imperialistic mind of frightfulness has adopted the latter, and we, the American people, are united because we have chosen the former. No great country has ever lived without religion as the empires which have fallen proves because of the starvation of religion and if we expect "our boys" to return with clean morals and unstained from the relaxation that men between the ages of 21 and 31—the draft age—seek in the hours of loneliness, it is essential that we take care of them in the temptations that beset a soldier in the conditions that surround the life of an army. As the men need to relax at this age of life it is the duty of the American public to see that "our boys" are provided with the kind that leads to the uplift and the betterment of their morals so that the great American race yet undeveloped will reap the reward of our sacrifice in the years to come.

Prof. Michael, as a careful observer of religion, politics and all social questions, expressed a profound joy at the development of the week. He said when the Jew, the Protestant, and the Catholic can work shoulder to shoulder and bend every effort for the one great cause it is a most gratifying and inspiring sight. He told of his great interest in the legislation of placing children between 12 and 16 years on farms and the great danger of leaving them untrained and undisciplined for five and a half months in the year as the world is looking to the children of America as their great hope when the readjustment period of the world's affairs arrives.

The Rev. John J. Hickey made a few remarks, and brought to mind that he believed Kingston to be the least characteristic of bigotry of any city in the state as in his 25 years of service here he has seen very little evidence of it among our citizens. He read the following telegrams:

New York, March 21, 1918.
Rev. J. J Hickey,
Kingston, N. Y.

Please announce to campaign officers and workers that a permanent memorial of the campaign is being prepared for his eminence and that we desire the name of every campaign officer and worker for this record by Wednesday, March 26th. Special blanks will be mailed you for purpose of forwarding names and you are urged to be careful not to omit any faithful worker from the roster. However, only the names of workers are designated as contributed list will be made up separately at a later date. We suggest that each captain and chairman of committee submit list of workers to campaign chairman, who with yourself, will certify and forward same to campaign headquarters.

March 9th, 1918.

The Hon. A. J Cook.
Kingston, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Cook:—

Through Vincent Gorman, I have just received your courteous invitation to be present at the meeting in the high school auditorium on Monday evening, when the War Work of the Knights of Columbus is to be presented to the people of Kingston. I greatly regret that a previous engagement of long standing will prevent my being present, but I beg you to say to the chairman of your campaign committee, J. M. Herbert, and to those having the work in charge, that they have my deepest interest and co-operation and may command me in any way that it is possible for me to serve them in their campaign.

The work of the Knights of Columbus together with the Y. M. C. A in providing recreational, social and spiritual centers for our boys "over there" is too well-known and too priceless in value to permit any lover of God and humanity to hesitate in making real contribution and giving hearty support to it.

Appreciating the courtesy of your invitation and praying for success in your effort.

I beg to remain,
Very cordially yours,
F. B. SEELEY.

A. T. Clearwater
Counselor at Law
Kingston, N. Y., March 21, 1918.

My dear Joe:—

It is with great pleasure that I enclose a contribution to the Knights of Columbus fund. To me the most impressive fact in your canvass is the hearty co-operation between the two great branches of the Christian church militant. It demonstrates again the truth for which I so often have contended, that in all the great essentials Kingston is the equal of any community in the land, a condition due to the high aspirations and united efforts of Catholic and Protestant alike.

With many kind regards, and best wishes for your unbounded success, I am as ever,

Very sincerely yours,
A. T. CLEARWATER.

CAPTAIN ROOSA NEW C. H. AGENT

Well Known Steamboat Man of Newburgh Appointed Rondout Agent of Central-Hudson Line—Succeeds J. F. Steed.

Captain "Zach" Roosa of Newburgh, probably one of the best known steamboat men along the Hudson river, has been appointed the agent of the Central-Hudson Line at the office in this city, succeeding J. F. Steed, who will be transferred to another city.

Captain Roosa assumed his new duties today, getting the freight house and docks in shape for the reception of the steamer Poughkeepsie, which opens navigation between New York and this port on Monday. Captain Roosa has been in the employ of the Central-Hudson Line since 1872, and during that time has commanded about every steamer of the Central-Hudson Line.

During the past few years he has been the company's agent at Albany and Troy.

J. F. Steed, who has been capable agent of the Central-Hudson Line for a number of years, carries with him the best wishes of a host of friends. Just where he will be located is not known.

FOUR MEETINGS FOR FRUIT GROWERS

The Ulster County Farm Bureau Association has made arrangements to hold a series of four meetings in the fruit section of Ulster county to discuss the best methods of controlling the apple aphis, red bug and pear psylla. Meetings are to be held as follows:

Milton—Wednesday, March 27, at 7:30 p. m., at the Community House.

Highland—Thursday, March 28, at 7:30 p. m., at the high school.

Clintondale—Saturday, March 30, at 7:30 p. m., at the Grange Hall.

Professor C. R. Crosby of the State College of Agriculture, extension specialist on insect pest control, will give an illustrated lecture on the control of above mentioned pests at all four meetings.

A general discussion and question box will follow each lecture.

EAST KINGSTON HAS "GONE OVER"

The $1,500 K. of C. War Fund assignment to St. Colman's Church, East Kingston, has been exceeded. The Italian teams, who have aggregated $125.50 of the $1,232.75 previously reported, have a much larger sum still pledged, and the children's campaign in one school in East Kingston—Public School No. 16S—of which Miss Kathryn M. O'Connor is principal, will amount to $100 or more, with a second school in East Kingston—Public School No. 6—of which Miss Phoebe Cheshire is principal, still to be heard from.

One Chance Cost $3.

Joseph A. Brady, who is an agent for a well known brand of cigar, took a chance this morning by running his advertising car on the left hand side of Broadway, near Thomas street, and letting it stand for a minute or so. He was arrested by Officer Shader and Judge Schirick imposed a fine of $3 when he was arraigned in police court.

IN THE SERVICE OF OUR COUNTRY

PRIVATE PETER M. TCHEON.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. McCutcheon of Hudson street, now "Somewhere in France."

William Glaccum of New Rochelle, N. Y., who has been connected with the United Cigar Company's store on Wall street, this city, for several years, has enlisted in the United States Naval Reserve and will begin training at Pelham Bay Park next week.

Joseph Emmick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Emmick of Lindsley avenue is now stationed at Fort Bliss. He enlisted February 20 and was sent to Fort Slocum and later to Texas. He writes that he is enjoying the best of health and likes army life. His friends may write him at the following address: "Private Joseph Emmick, 7th Cavalry, Fort Bliss, El Paso, Texas.

His many friends in this city and Newburgh may address him: Private Ed. J. Bryce, 18th Co., 5th Rgt., U. S. Marines, care of New York Postmaster. Private Bryce writes that he is in excellent health.

FLOATING ICE OFF KINGSTON POINT

Hudson River Open Between Rondout and New York—First Boat Up Monday—Towing Season Opens Later—Other River Notes.

There is now open water between Rondout and New York, and the Hudson river off Kingston Point is full of floating ice. The first boat up the river for the season will be the Poughkeepsie of the Central Hudson Line which comes through Monday. No date has been fixed as yet for the opening of the towing season. The floating ice in the river is not bothering the Transport which has no difficulty in keeping close to her schedule.

From Hudson comes the report that the ice was moving out at that point Thursday, and the danger of freshets is past.

Thursday night Frank M. Best opened the lighthouse at Hudson which is three days earlier than last year.

The ferry George H. Power made its first trip of the season between Athens and Hudson Thursday morning, experiencing little difficulty. Last year the first trip was made March 24.

The Saugerties and New York Steamboat Company expect to be able to start the steamer Ida making trips between Saugerties and New York next week.

The ice this season has been the heaviest rivermen remember during the past thirty years. Thirty inches of ice was common and it was said that three feet of ice was found in a few places along the Hudson the latter part of January.

The ice has been breaking up gradually and moving out of the river without kicking up much trouble in this vicinity.

Miller Goes With Van Benschoten

A. C. Miller, the well known automobile salesman and accessory man, has accepted a position with Van's Garage of this city, located at Nos. 529-531 Broadway. John Van Benschoten, proprietor of this garage has put in a very up-to-date accessory store, which Mr. Miller will have charge of. In addition to this Mr. Van Benschoten has the agency for the Dodge, Chalmers, Peerless, Marmon, Nash and Studebaker pleasure cars; also Nash trucks and Smith-Form-A-Trucks. J. D. Schenck is salesmanager of the company.

HURRICANE OF BATTLE BEATS AGAINST BRITISH IN FRANCE

Germans in Mass Formation Mowed Down by Machine Gun Fire Without Making Any Real Headway---Fighting Breaks Out on Italian Front---"Decisive Battle" Says Berlin Paper.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, March 22.—A hurricane of battle, in which the Germans suffered terrific losses, raged in the darkness of last night along fifty miles of the British front in France from the Sensee river, opposite Arras, to the Oise river south of St. Quentin.

At every point the Germans were held to their battle positions, the war office announced today.

After midnight a comparative lull settled down upon the blood-soaked field, but Field Marshal Haig reported this morning that a renewal of the German drive was expected any moment.

The battle so far has been an orgy of death for the Germans, for the Teutonic soldiery was flung forward in mass formation, and was mowed down by the withering machine gun and artillery fire of the British.

"Until a late hour in the night the fighting continued along the whole front from the Oise to the Sensee river," the war office reported.

"Everywhere, however, the enemy was held to his battle positions. The German tactics of advancing in mass formation offered the British opportunity for exacting a heavy toll of life and full advantage was taken of it. All reports agree that the Germans suffered exceedingly heavy losses. No serious attacks developed this morning, but they are still expected."

along which the opposing armies struggled, was an inferno of noise and flame.

The ground rocked and trembled beneath the salvos of the mighty guns while the sky was ablaze with the glare of bursting shells and the flares sent up by both sides.

Into this roaring furnace dense masses of German soldiers were driven, only to be swept away by the shrapnel and machine gun bullets which sprayed the forefield by the millions.

There were hand-to-hand struggles, at some points, the soldiers looking like figures from some other world as they wrestled and swayed in the smoke and turmoil, their faces hidden by grotesque gas masks.

There amidst the fitful glare of the shells and the white fire which spurted from numberless muzzles of machine guns and rifles the British soldiers fought like heroes, upholding the bravest traditions of their army.

Copenhagen, March 22.—A copy of the Berlin newspaper Taglische Rundschau, an organ of the German War Party, received here today, says that "Germany has engaged England in a decisive battle" for a general peace and that upon the outcome will depend Germany's future.

The German paper evidently refers to the German drive which opened on the western front yesterday.

London, March 22.—New and powerful attacks in the German offensive along a 50-mile front in France, between the Scarpe river, and Vendheuil, were delivered against the British last night, but all were repulsed, the war office announced today.

Field Marshal Haig reported that the Germans were flung back and suffered heavy losses.

The fighting continued fiercely until midnight when it died down.

At the time Field Marshal Haig made his report the German assaults had ceased, but a renewal of them was expected momentarily.

Unofficial advices from the front reported a continuation of the furious struggle which promises to develop into the greatest battle in history.

Powerful thrusts were driven home against the British line all day Thursday, said advices from the front, and the Germans lost enormous numbers of men. The assaults were made in mass formation and the field of action was literally covered with dead and wounded Germans when night fell.

The German bombardment which preceded the first of the grand assaults, covered slightly more than forty miles of front, but when the infantry rolled forward the fighting zone was lengthened to about fifty miles.

Huge Austro-Hungarian Skoda guns were used by the Germans in their preliminary cannonade and so terrific was the gunfire that the detonations could be heard one hundred miles away.

This was the first time that Austro-Hungarian artillery had been used on the western front. It was reported that the Germans used tanks also.

Picked German shock troops were used in the wave of the assaulting forces, followed up by huge masses of reserves.

The attacks spread all along the British salient, lying between the Scarpe river and Vendheuil, but the strongest pressure was delivered south of Cambrai where the Germans claim to have made their gains.

This is the extreme southern end of the British front.

British wounded began arriving from the front today but the whole nation remains calm. There is a feeling of the utmost confidence that the British lines will hold and that the Germans will fling themselves in vain against the rock-bound defence of the gallant soldiers of old England.

While the Germans were pounding the British front they kept up powerful presure against the French and the violent bombardments between Rheims and the Meuse river indicated that a thrust might be delivered in Champagne at the same time that the Germans are on the offensive against the British.

In fact, the whole western front is seething with battle. Where the infantry forces are not at grips in their savage struggle the giant guns are thundering night and day.

The German offensive did not come as any surprise. It found the British ready, just as the French are ready to repel any drive against their lines. Not only had the Germans advertised their intentions, but secret information had been received by the Allied war council as to the very hour of the attack.

The Germans had timed their assault to begin on the first day of spring and it was carried out according to schedule. The operation was the first formidable offensive movement that the Germans had made on the western front since their drive against Verdun, which opened in February, 1916. That offensive continued until late in the summer and if the Teutons plan a drive on even a greater scale in the present instance there is no telling how many weeks and even months this campaign will last.

It was reported from Holland that the Kaiser, accompanied by Field Marshal Von Hindenberg and General Von Ludendorff, had gone to the western front to witness the opening of the offensive, but this has not been confirmed by Berlin.

Germany is evidently staking all upon her western front offensive, but if the results are no better than those of the first day's fighting it is foredoomed to failure.

Notwithstanding the intensity of the bombardment—the heaviest ever known in history—and the terrific nature of the infantry assaults, Field Marshal Haig reports that the Germans nowhere attained their objectives.

The field gray hordes were flung forward with the utmost recklessness and with absolutely no regard for human life. They were favored by wind from the east which carried off the fumes of their poisonous gas shells and by a smoke screen which had been projected from their trenches, but were met by such a storm of machine gun bullets and shells that they were sent reeling back when they tried to break into the English positions.

There was bloody fighting west of St. Quentin, where the Germans tried to break the Britons' grip on their positions along the Somme river. This struggle was duplicated farther north all along the front west of Cambrai, especially on the Arras-Cambrai road. The German losses in those sectors were tremendous.

The scene of the struggle has witnessed some of the hardest fighting of the present war. It was upon this terrain that the British launched their great Somme offensive in the spring of 1916, when the English bombardment attained a tensity unknown up to that time.

It was also in that district that the German retreat occurred in 1917 when the Teutons evacuated more than 1,200 square miles of French soil.

It was the scene also of the great Arras offensive and the battle at Cambrai last year when the British drove forward in a surprise assault, all but capturing the German stronghold of Cambrai. Later the Germans succeeded in striking back the greater part of the ground they had lost.

Auto Truck Ran Away.

Thursday afternoon a large auto truck from Newark, N. J., got away from the driver on the Sleightsburgh hill and ran away down the hill crashing into a wagon standing in front of Sleight's store near the ferry and also into the store building. The wagon was damaged, but fortunately no one was injured.

FIGHTING ON ITALIAN FRONT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rome, March 22.—Fighting has broken out along the entire Italian battle front, the war office announced today.

Along the Piave river there are violet cannonades.

The flare up of fighting in Italy together with the growing intensity of the artillery fire along the Piave river, may have considerable significance. The view has been expressed that Germany might undertake an offensive against the Italians while making a thrust against the allies on the western front.

The German drive on the western front began yesterday and apparently the fighting activity on the Italian line began to increase at the same time.

Whether or not Germany really intends a blow against Italy cannot be foretold at this time but the next 48 hours should show whether or not Germany began an offensive on the western front to cloak a new drive against the Italians.

BOOKS NEEDED IN MILITARY HOSPITALS

The camp libraries have received many demands for books about the war from soldiers who are preparing to go "over there." But for the wounded men in the hospitals, books that take the mind off the war are frequently preferred by physicians. So no matter what kind of a book you give, so long as it is a good book, it will fill in somewhere.

Cheerful endings are desirable in fiction for the wounded. A British nurse tells of a serial story that had been read by two of her patients, one of who was depressed for a whole day because the heroine died. "I wish, sister, I had never read it," he explained, "I got to like that girl and if I could have found one something the same when I got out and about again, I should have married her if she would have had me."

As we all know, our own boys are not going to be immune from wounds and shell shock, trench feet, and fever. If you wish to help them in their weary hospital days and in their convalescence, you can reach them best through the medium of some good book.

Give your favorite author; the novel that interested you so much when you were on your vacation last summer; the volume of poems with a meaning and a message for you. We can't all be Red Cross nurses but we can help the wounded by sending bright, cheerful books to them. The public library will see that they get them.

Before County Judge Jenkins.

The matter of the general assignment of Daniel V. Bryan to Joseph Bushoushall and John R. DeVany for the benefit of creditors was taken up Thursday before County Judge Jenkins and adjourned until April 1. John R. De Vany appeared in person. The Union and Pacific Tea Company, creditors, was represented by Assistant District Attorney Hasbrouck, counsel for Jamieson and Pollock, F. M. Tompkins appeared for Caddick and Company.

The Big Game To-night.

All indications point to a large crowd being present at the game of indoor baseball to be played at the armory this evening between Company M and the police department. Following the game Muller's orchestra will play for dancing. The proceeds will be donated to the Ulster County Chapter of the Red Cross. It will be an interesting game and for a worthy cause and should be well patronized.

Runaway Boys From Saugerties.

Thursday evening Officer Reardon picked up four runaway boys from Saugerties on Broadway, near Foxhall avenue. The boys were turned over to their fathers early this morning. The runaways were Douglas Robinson, Augustus Pocketson and Jerry and George Russell.

Raymond Had A Fall.

Charles W. Raymond was picked up on John street, Thursday evening by Officer Simpson. He had fallen and cut his head. Raymond was removed to Dr Van Wagenen's office and later to the Benedictine Sanitarium.

No. 3 of a Series of
Labor Conservation Chats

There's No Desk Room for Waste in Business Today

WE ARE CONVINCED that when we eliminate waste in our business, whether it be in time or labor or both, there is a reciprocal adjustment of the scales in favor of telephone service, the product which you buy and we sell.

IN OTHER WORDS, if we can do away with any waste time or labor that may be involved in furnishing telephone service, we can put an equal amount of time and labor into the service itself and to some extent add to the comfort, convenience, and efficiency that you derive from its use.

"SLOW" TELEPHONE ACCOUNTS, the accounts on which repeated efforts to collect must be made, result in a duplication of effort. Duplication means waste and in any war-time business organization that is keeping its eye on the military and commercial needs of the country, there is no room for waste.

TELEPHONE SUBSCRIBERS CAN ASSIST in the elimination of this waste by paying their bills within the reasonable specified time.

Mothers Here Interested in New Treatment

NOTHING TO SWALLOW, YOU JUST RUB IT ON.

Local Druggists Have Arranged to Sell 25c, 50c, or $1.00 Package on 30 Days' Trial.

Local druggists report a great deal of interest, especially among mothers with small children, in the remarkable external "vapor" treatment, known as Vick's VapoRub, recently introduced here from the South.

This treatment makes unnecessary "dosing" with injurious medicines, using flannel jackets and chest protectors, or keeping the children shut up indoors. You can let the little chaps run outdoors and get their needed fresh air and exercise. If colds do start, "nip them in the bud" by using VapoRub—it is externally applied and can therefore be used freely and often, with perfect safety, on the smallest member of the family.

VapoRub comes in salve form and is applied over the throat and chest, covering with a warm flannel cloth. The body heat releases medicated vapors that are inhaled with every breath, all night long, through the air passages to the lungs. These vapors loosen the phlegm and clear the air passages.

In cases of very severe chest colds or incipient pneumonia, first apply hot, wet towels over the throat and chest to open the pores. VapoRub is then absorbed through and stimulates the skin, taking out that tightness and soreness in the chest.

Ask your druggist about the 30 days' trial offer. —Advertisement.

KEPT THEM MOVING

English Major Has Machine Gun Crew on the Jump.

About as Little Uncertainty in His Orders as There Are Polite Phrases in the Language He Employed in Issuing Them.

I make my way through the thick brush at Camp Upton to a machine gun range, guided by the intermittent staccato chatter of a Colt and hoping that I'm not by any chance wandering on to the private reserve of any busy bullets, William Slavens McNutt writes in Collier's.

I come out of the woods on the rear of the gun position. Near a big campfire a dozen or more American officers are grouped around two machine guns listening to the instructions of an English major. The English officer is a short, spare, peppery veteran with a raspy voice that he can use for the same purpose that a mule skinner uses a blacksnake.

"Burr-wuff!" he shouts. That's as near as I can get to it phonetically. Two captains leap to their places by the machine gun. The one who sights and operates the piece throws himself flat on his back with head cradled on the knees of the man feeding. There is some slight delay and the English major breaks into song.

"Come, come! Carry on! What are we waiting for? You should have killed a hundred by now. What is it? What is it? My word! Not so slow. We're not having dinner, you know; we're killing Boches. What the blinkety-blank's wrong now? Come, come! Carry on! Carry on!"

The gun speaks jarringly. One side of the barrel spits a stream of yellow cartridge cases over the breast of the operator holding the trigger. Three hundred yards distant the blade of bullets slices the ground before the target and throws up a little line of dust.

The major orders a fifty yard advance. The American officers dismount the piece, go forward at the double-quick and set it up once more. The operator pulls the trigger. Nothing happens. He fusses and tugs. Still no result. The English major calms himself and leaves a great sigh. He looks at the gun crew like a man with no insurance viewing a total loss. "Oh, my eye!" he groans sadly. "How dead you'd have been by now! All right, leave off, leave off! Never mind."

He points to the man who carried the ammunition and who is standing behind the gun curiously watching the efforts of the crew to make it shoot.

"Next time don't stand up behind the gun. You stick up there like a dummy in a shop window. A body would think you were an advertisement for something. You're not trying to sell the gun to the Boches, you know. Standing there giving away the gun position! Next time find cover twenty paces to the right or left and try to act like a bit of mud. Yes!"

Had Been Through Hell.

Louis Raemaekers, the famous Dutch cartoonist, now in this country, whom the London Times has called "the only great genius brought out by the war," was unheard of before the war began. On August 1, 1914, he was living quietly with his family, contentedly painting the tulip fields, waterways, cattle and windmills of his native Holland. Four days later he drew the first cartoon, "Christendom After Twenty Centuries," of a series that was to reveal him as a champion of civilization and make his name a household word in every country. Raemaekers personally investigated the Belgian horror, and though a hundred of his early cartoons bear witness to the burning impression made upon his mind, he has only once brought himself to speak publicly of this experience. It was at a dinner given the artist at the Savage club, London, and, pointing to the portraits of Peary, Shott, Nansen and Shackleton, Raemaekers said: "I, too, have been an explorer, gentlemen. I have explored a hell, and it was terror unspeakable." Raemaekers is in his forty-eighth year.

Weekly War Story.

The company cook went to the commanding officer and respectfully asked when the soldiers were to be supplied with gas masks. The officer answered that he did not know. A week later, the cook again expressed his desire for a gas mask. This time, the officer happened to have a sample of the latest contrivance of this nature, which will probably be used by our soldiers in the trenches. He showed it to the cook, who immediately asked to borrow it. Inquiry revealed that the cook's idea was to put the mask on before he tackled a big job of peeling onions.

Will Soon Have Sea Mastery.

E. G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, told the 500 guests of the Allentown (Pa.) chamber of commerce at its banquet recently that the submarine destroyers which the Bethlehem corporation will build for the government are more than all of the destroyers now in the world. Mr. Grace said he regarded the rapid consfruction of destroyers as the solution of the submarine menace. Bethlehem plants now employ 30,000 men as compared with 9,000 five years ago. Charles M. Schwab, who also spoke said that the pay roll of the Bethlehem plants is now $100,000,000 a year.—Iron Age.

MEETING HELD BY TUBERCULOSIS COM.

At a special meeting of the executive council of the Ulster County Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis, held at the office of the chairman, the Hon. Joseph M. Fowler, this week, action was taken regarding the application of Miss O'Shea for an indefinite leave of absence, on account of ill health, and other matters of import regarding tuberculosis work in the city and county were considered.

The committee granted Miss O'Shea's request, expressing its sincere sympathy in the cause of her request, and the leave of absence was granted, to take effect April 15th. Miss O'Shea was also very highly complimented upon her loyal and efficient service as special Tuberculosis Visiting Nurse for the Committee especial appreciative mention being made of her work in connection with the recent Red Cross Christmas seal sale. A committee, consisting of the president, Dr. Gates and the Rev. John J. Hickey, was appointed with power, to secure a successor to Miss O'Shea to take up her duties during her enforced absence. That committee has secured the services of Miss Brown assistant nurse at the Tuberculosis Hospital, whose four years' experience at the hospital, and general training make her especially competent to take up the work and carry it forward until Miss O'Shea's return.

The question of a City Tuberculosis Dispensary was also brought up and carefully investigated. While it was most favorably considered by the council, it was decided to hold the matter open until an adjourned meeting to be held next Wednsday afternoon at Mr. Fowler's office at four o'clock, when Dr. Prest of the State Charities Aid Association, especially conversant with such problems will be present. At that meeting other matters of importance relative to tuberculosis work in the city and county will be considered.

FROST KEEPS GAS MEN VERY BUSY

They Have Spent a Week Hunting For a Leak in the Main Downtown —It Took Eight Weeks to Locate a Break in Ponckhockie.

For a week past workmen in the employ of the Kingston Gas & Electric Company have been hunting for a leak in the gas main downtown, but up to noon today they had not located it. The method of locating the leak is by punching a hole in the brick pavement on lower Broadway and the Strand. These holes are punched about fifteen or more feet apart. If no smell of gas is emitted the men know they have not located the leak.

The record hunt this past winter was for a leak in the gas main in Ponckhockie and after eight weeks spent in a search for it it was finally located on Catherine street. When the earth was excavated and the pipe uncovered it was found that the frost had broken the main squarely in two.

Another bad break that was found after considerable trouble was that on Broadway in front of the Orpheum Theater. In order to make repairs it was necessary to excavate considerable pavement and earth and dig under the trolley tracks. Here it was also found that the frost had broken the pipe in two.

Indoor Baseball Tonight.

The big sporting event of the season is scheduled for this evening at 8 o'clock in the state armory, when Mayor Canfield will toss the first ball across the plate in the indoor baseball game between a picked team from Company M and a selected team from the police department. Physical Director Godfrey, of the Y. M. C. A., is expected to be called upon to umpire. It is said that several insurance agents dogged Mr. Godfrey's steps today when they learned he was to officiate to have him take out an accident policy. The cops are well up on signals, having had considerable practice with the signal box system, and expect to overcome their opponents by some classy inside stuff. The soldiers say leave it to them. The city ambulance and a crew of Red Cross nurses will be on duty at the armory. The proceeds are for the benefit of the Red Cross. The armory should be jammed this evening.

Tommies Surprise Italy.

Whole battalions of Thomas Atkinses, now that the long-expected snowfall has buried the Austro-Germans in deep Alpine drifts, have been paying visits to the Milan opera house and receiving immense ovations. By way of acknowledgment Tommy gave the laurel-crowned "Tipperary," and created a sensation, as well he might, in that sacred mecca of Italian opera. Flowers were showered upon him in most embarrassing fashion. The reason of this delicate attention may be the kilts, at which the people gaze in undisguised amazement. One veteran peasant exclaimed: "Fancy, women as well as men go to war in that country, and yet they look as though they would make mincemeat of the Germans." Little wonder that some of these kilted "ladies" received not only flowers, but equally embarrassing kisses.—Christian Science Monitor.

"With the Man on the Can"

It Took Years To Find Cosmolac

There was a big demand for a clear, transparent varnish that would resist sunshine, snow, rain, hot and cold soapy water, etc. This perfect varnish must not crack, scratch nor bruise white. It must be as strong as an extremely thin sheet of steel—as clear as plate glass—to protect and preserve as well as beautify.

Eventually Cosmolac was discovered by one of the oldest paint houses in the country.

Cosmolac is a tough, elastic finish for any surface requiring varnish either indoors or out. It is perfectly transparent and does not affect the color of undercoats, wood grains, lettering, striping, or any decoration.

VICTORY MENUS.

These menus, planned to conserve time, labor and money, and to save the foods that are scarce and use those of which there is an abundance, are Victory Menus in more senses than one. They are prepared by the Department of Home Economics of the State College of Agriculture and endorsed by the New York State Food Commission

Saturday—Porkless Day.

Dinner—Pinto or soy bean souffle, scalloped potatoes, *macedoine of vegetables, apple rings

*These dishes may be omitted and the meal still be balanced

While Americans are asked to eat more beans, it is requested that they favor the darker varieties, such as pinto, kidney or soy beans, and reserve the white or navy beans for the army and navy. Not that there is any difference in the food value of these varieties, but the boys who have gone to war seem to prefer the lighter colored bean and it is but right that the public for whom they are fighting should give them what they want.

Bean Souffle.

1 pint hot boiling bean pulp, 1 or 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon onion juice, 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley.

Beat the yolk of the eggs and add to them the other ingredients. Fold in the well beaten whites of the eggs. Heap the mixture lightly in a baking dish and bake in a slow oven for about 20 minutes or until it is set. Serve immediately.

Fish Hash.

Take equal parts of cold flaked fish and boiled potatoes finely chopped Season with salt and pepper. Melt enough butter in a pan to moisten fish and potatoes Put in the fish and potatoes, stir until heated, then cook until well browned underneath, fold and serve

Apple Rings.

Apple rings are made by cooking unpeeled apples, sliced one-half inch thick, in corn syrup until they are transparent The corn syrup may be diluted 1-3 with water. Serve the rings with cream.

Recipes for any of the dishes in these menus which cannot be found in cook books, may be had by writing to the Department of Home Economics, State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N Y.

BAN IS OPTIMISTIC

American League President Believes Season Will Be Good.

Head of Junior Major League Takes More Rosy View as a Result of Winter Developments—Abundance of Players.

President Ban Johnson of the American league, who was not inclined to be optimistic over the baseball outlook at the close of the 1917 season, has been encouraged to take a more rosy view as the result of the winter's developments.

"Interest has been maintained all winter by the numerous exchanges of players in both leagues and I begin to feel optimistic as to the future," said Mr. Johnson. "There will be an abundance of playing talent and in spite of the army draft and navy enlistments, which have deprived the leagues of some splendid ball players, there will be others to fill their places.

"Colonel Ruppert made an excellent move when he engaged Miller Huggins to manage the Yankees. Huggins is a smart baseball man and in due time I feel confident he will obtain successful results. Of course, he must have time to size up the players who will report to him. You must remember that he is entirely new in the American league and has many things to learn. But you can't take away from him his complete knowledge of the inside workings of baseball.

"Ed Barrow, I am sure, will prove just the sort of man the Red Sox need to get the results of which that great team of players Frazee has gathered is capable and right here I want to say that after talking with Connie Mack I am inclined to believe the Athletics are not so badly off as some of their critics have made it appear.

"Fielder Jones, with the changes made in his Browns, and with a little more luck, should prove what we all believe him to have, the talents of a successful leader. Cleveland has been hard hit, but Jim Dunn is gamely rebuilding.

"Altogether our league seems in good shape, and as I say, I am much more cheerful about the outlook for a good season now than I was two months ago. It did really look bad to me then."

SWIMMER OFFERS TO TEACH

Bud Goodwin, American swimming champion for 17 years, has offered to serve as a swimming instructor wherever Uncle Sam can use him. He will probably be assigned to a naval training station. Goodwin is beyond military age. He has represented the New York Athletic club during his period as champion.

FIVE OF OHIO STATE CAPTAINS IN SERVICE

When Hap Courtney, captain of the western conference, enlisted in the ensign school for the navy at Chicago, he was the fifth captain of Ohio State to enter the service. Bolen, basketball; Steinhilber, cross-country; Harley, football captain-elect, and Todd, track leader, are the other four. Captains of tennis and baseball teams were turned down on account of physical defects or they would be gone, too.

SCHMIDT, WHO RETIRED, MAY RETURN TO GAME

Charles Schmidt, who, as first baseman for the world's champion Boston Braves of 1915, was one of the few big league baseball players to actually enter retirement in the height of their prime, may come back.

But, should the players who rose from the Baltimore sand lots to a regular position with the team that won baseball's premier honors after one of the greatest spurts in the game's history, really decide to again don a uniform, it will be merely through an act of patriotism.

His business is thriving and baseball could never call him back unless he thought he were needed to help fill the ranks of those who may be called off to war.

COUNTY COURT NOTICE.

The People of the State of New York, to the Sheriff of the County of Ulster, Greeting:—You are hereby commanded to summon the several persons who shall have been drawn in your county, to serve as jurors, at a County Court, to be held in and for your county, at the Court House, in the City of Kingston, in said county, on Monday, the 1st day of April, 1918, to appear thereat, to bring before the said court all prisoners then being in the jail of your county, together with all processes and proceedings any way concerning them in your hands, and make proclamation in manner prescribed by law, notifying all persons bound to appear at the said court by recognizance or otherwise, to appear thereat, and requiring all Justices of the Peace, Coroners, and other officers who have taken recognizance for the appearance of any person at such court, or who have taken any inquisition, or the examination of any prisoner or witness, to return such recognizances, inquisitions and examinations to the court at the opening thereof on the first day of its sitting.

Witness, Hon. James Jenkins, Esquire, County Judge of Ulster County, at the Court House in Kingston, this 5th day of March, 1918.

F. G. TRAVER,
District Attorney.

PROCLAMATION.—State of New York, Ulster County, ss.: The undersigned, Sheriff of said County, in conformity to a precept in this behalf directed and delivered, by this his proclamation, requires all persons bound to appear at the County Court, to be held in and for the said County of Ulster, at Kingston, in said county, on Monday, the 1st day of April, 1918, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, by recognizance or otherwise, to appear thereat. And he requires all Justices of the Peace, Coroners and other officers, who have taken any recognizance for the appearance of any person at said court, or who have taken any inquisition, or the examination of any person or witness, to return such recognizances, inquisitions and examinations to the said court at the opening thereof on the first day of its sitting. Signed at the sheriff's office in said county March 5th, 1918.

WRIGHT J. SMITH,
Sheriff of Ulster County.

JUST A DUB, BUT--

He Had at Least One Good Deed to His Credit.

As standards are on this earth he had not amounted to much.

He had lived, laughed, loved, sinned and died in the common way of all. He had made a few friends, and a few enemies, but he had come and passed as one of the many. His had been common toil and he had done it in a ordinary way.

And so when his soul at last stood before the Great White Gate there was no stir among the saints to receive it.

"What have you to say for yourself?" said St. Peter, sternly, but not unkindly.

"Nothing," replied the soul, timidly.

"Nothing!" exclaimed St. Peter. "Did you never get your name in the papers?"

"Never. I was never considered very clever down there."

"Oh. Didn't make fine speeches then?"

"No. I couldn't talk on my feet."

"I see. Didn't go to church very often either, did you?"

"No. I was often very tired and on Sundays I slept late in the mornings and played with the kiddies the rest of the day."

"You died in your bed, while thousands of your fellowmen died on the battlefield, fighting for their country?"

"Yes. When the war came I was beyond the age of enlistment."

"Well, can't you think of one thing that you did that might recommend you for admission here?"

"I'm afraid not. All my life I was just a dub."

"Just a dub, eh?"

"Yes. Never did shine at anything. Just a plodder, trying hard all the time to get somewhere, but never actually arriving. And yet—"

"Yet what,"

"If you will permit me to say it, during the great war down there I didn't force a committee to spend two or three hours trying to convince me that I ought to buy Liberty bonds. I couldn't fight; couldn't be a general or a captain; I didn't know enough to fill a government job, but I did know it was every man's duty to back his country to the limit, and I bought all the Liberty bonds I could, without an argument."

"Fine," said St. Peter enthusiastically "come right on in. Did you notice a crowd of fine-looking, high-stepping souls going down as you came up?"

"Yes."

"Well that was a bunch of loud-talking rich spirits who delayed the end of the war a year because they wouldn't buy Liberty bonds until they were convinced that their purchases were absolutely necessary. They're going to get a taste of trench life under Old Satan in the financial slacker's department."

Are Aviators Born?

"There was a time when it was held that a man must be especially born for aeronautic duties," writes Henry Woodhouse, vice president of the Aerial League of America, in Everybody's.

"Experience had brought out the fact that the average young man can make an excellent aviator. Captain Guynemer, Major Bishop, Captain William Thaw, Captain Ball of the Lafayette escadrille, and practically all the famous aviators were not men who impressed anybody with being different from other young men.

"Of the thousands of allied aviators there are probably not 500 men who had seen more than a few months of military service before joining the air service. Most of them had never seen any military service.

"In planning an organization for the selection and training of aviators, the aircraft board and signal corps of the United States have had to prepare to deal entirely with men who had never seen military service, as other countries have done."

Safest Place.

We were calling at a home in East Cleveland, not more than a hundred yards from where the Nickel Plate tracks cross Superior. As we rang the bell we noticed something that gave us a shudder of apprehension, and when our hostess answered the door we gave vent to our feelings at once.

"Mrs. Emdash," we said, "do you know where your children are playing?"

"No," she gasped, paling a little with alarm. "Where are they?"

"Up there on the railroad tracks!" we told her.

She looked relieved.

"Oh," she said, "I was afraid they were playing in the street. I am so afraid of the automobiles. Won't you come in—I'll call Mr. Emdash."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TNT Poison Through Skin.

Trinitrotoluene poisoning is a new disease in America, but one that has attracted much attention since our factories began making munitions in large quantities. There is some dispute how the TNT poisons, but the Medical Record says the weight of evidence is in favor of its absorption through the skin, though inhaling the fumes may be responsible to some extent.

Why Solitude Is Desirable.

Solitude is the chief support of the affections. It would be impossible to love your fellow man if you knew you could never get away from him.—From the Atlantic Magazine.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO K. OF C. WAR FUND

The list of contributions to the K. of C. War Work Fund printed below is that turned in Tuesday evening. Those whose subscriptions were turned in later must exercise patience and wait until it is possible to print them. While the K. of C. War Fund is a big and important matter, it is not the only thing in the world—a battle that may decide the war is now in progress and The Freeman must find time and space to print every word obtainable about it.

Errors in the lists printed should be called to the attention of the K. of C. Campaign Headquarters, where corrections will be made. No corrections should be sent to The Freeman, as in this matter it deals only with Headquarters.

Clean Up Your Trees

Plan at once to clean up the scale, spores of fungi, and the eggs and larvæ of insects on your trees before the leaves come out, and insure better fruit next Fall.

"SCALECIDE" Does It

More effectively than Lime Sulfur as a dormant spray. No more expensive. Easy and nice to mix and apply. Will be glad to show you. Come in before buying any other spray.

Square Bottom Round Top

That's the shape of the fire pot in Square Pot Boilers. This exclusive construction is a big step in advance of all other designs of boilers. Radiating surface is increased, heat is in direct and close contact with water-containing sections, and grate bars are all of same length. This allows quick clearance and prevents clogging. Square Pot Boilers steam quickly and require less attention than other kinds.

They are made of highest quality materials by expert workmen and designed on scientifically correct, practically proven heating principles. Consult your dealer or write direct to us. No matter what your requirements are, there's a Square Pot Boiler or Furnace to fill them.

HELPFUL LECTURE THURSDAY EVENING

Given by Mr. Farley at the Elks' Club—Kingston Merchants Are Told of Modern Methods of Buying and Selling and General Management of a Retail Business—Illustrated by a Three-Reel Picture.

"The Troubles of a Merchant and How to Stop Them" was the subject of an interesting and very instructive lecture given Thursday evening at the Elks' club house by William H. Farley, under the direction of the Retailers' Group of Kingston Chamber of Commerce.

The pictures shown in connection with the lecture were clear and the film a three-reel Essany feature, portraying the many problems presented to the merchant and how to solve them in a practical and result-getting manner, is one of the cleverest pictures ever produced covering retail merchandising.

Over three hundred persons attended the lecture. The house committee and the officers of the Elks received the guests with characteristic hospitality, and "open house" was the order of the evening.

The lecturer was introduced by E. M. Heermans, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Heermans also made a brief address in which he outlined the work that the chamber is doing and asked for the hearty co-operation of all the members of the chamber and the citizens.

Mr. Heermans said that Mr. Farley's service had been secured through the courtesy of the national Cash Register Company, but not as an advertisement for this company.

Old fashioned store methods preventing a good display of goods in the store and store windows, poor system and old fashioned sales ideas were compared with modern methods.

The value of window displays as a selling asset was emphasized.

Retail failures and their causes, store organization, newspaper advertising; clerks, efficiency; credit business and delivery problems were also taken up in the lecture.

Mr. Farley has given this lecture in many large cities and it has secured much favorable publicity and commendation.

Mr. Farley is a pleasing speaker. He left a good impression here and Kingstonians would be glad to have the opportunity of hearing him again.

It's New, Natural, Simple and Inexpensive

Just Step On and Go

THE AUTOPED
FOR PLEASURE AND UTILITY

The Autoped is efficiently used going to and from the golf links and the country club, for the beach, and for any of the hundred and one little excursions where it is desirable to make the most of time without the expense attendant upon the big four wheeled motor veicles.

OF UNLIMITED USEFULNESS

The Autoped is an ideal conveyance for business men to and from their places of business; for physicians to answer hurry calls; for commercial salesmen to call on the trade; for employes to ride to and from work; and for anybody else who wants to save money, time and energy in going about.

For the ladies shopping, calling or just going. Folds in small size. For every man, business and pleasure, the quickest transportation for salesmen, doctors, solicitors, etc. So light you can carry with one hand. A land tender for autos.

JUST imagine owning the Magic Carpet of Bagdad!

Imagine possessing the power to step on a simple platform and almost at the expression of a wish to be able to GO!—anywhere, everywhere, quickly comfortably and at the least expense.

Imagine owning a means of transportation so light in weight that you can lift it with practically no effort—so simple that you can master it in a few short hours—so ingeniously constructed that it will travel at five to twenty-five miles an hour and keep going for nearly a hundred miles on a gallon of gasoline—and so well built that it will give you lasting service with a minimum upkeep cost.

Imagine all these things and then couple to them the greatest ratio of personal safety found in any mechanically operated vehicle and you will have a good mental picture of the latest thing in transportation—THE AUTOPED.

AMUSING PIECE OF "NERVE"

How Cool Impudence of Young British Naval Officers Relieved Tension of Situation.

In "Facing the Hindenburg Line," by Burris A. Jenkins, may be found a number of incidents in which naval men prove their coolness and heroism. Nobody knows all the stories of coolness and heroism among the naval men, says the author. We shall not learn them till the war is over, but here is one that perhaps the censors will allow to go by. It was told by a medical officer who was aboard the Franconia when she was sunk acting as a transport.

"We had five or six naval officers aboard. They were sitting in the smoking room—remember the smoking lounge in the old Franconia? It was very long, as long as this dining room and twice as broad. They had just ordered whisky sodas. Suddenly there was an explosion and the steel floor of the smoking room just buckled up and burst apart in the middle of the ship. One of those officers called the steward and said:

"'I ask you to witness, steward, that we have paid for these whisky sodas and have not had time to drink them.'

"Then the rascals went below, got on their lifebelts, came back again, asked the steward for a big sheet of foolscap, wrote out a long, 'we, the undersigned,' setting forth that they had ordered six whisky sodas, for which they had paid nine shillings, with a sixpence tip, and had not been allowed to drink them. Thereupon they entered a claim against the British government for the nine shillings and sixpence, with accrued interest from date. Then they walked in a body up to the bridge and handed it to the skipper. The old man told me afterward he never was so grateful to anybody as to these cool young devils for the steadying and bucking up influence of their impudence."

Japanese Tiger Hunters.

Tadasaburo Yamamoto, one of Japan's most wealthy men, who has immense shipping interests, returned recently from a tiger hunt in the Korean mountains. Mr. Yamamoto had with him 200 friends and professional sportsmen who are experts with the rifle. They left Tokyo on November 15 and established headquarters at Gensang, a small port on the northern coast of the Sea of Japan. The experienced sportsmen were distributed among the amateurs in the party, so that everybody was given an opportunity to bag what game was encountered.

Mr. Yamamoto and his party returned recently from the hunt after several successful weeks in the Korean mountains and has been feasting his friends on tiger steaks and other dishes from the game brought home.—New York Herald.

Easy Solution of Difficulty.

A pompous old gentleman upon reaching his home one evening found the street blockaded and a heap of earth piled against his doorstep. Observing a workman wielding his shovel in a nearby ditch, he accosted a passing policeman and complained that the laborer was trespassing upon private property.

"There's no other place t' throw it!" replied the workman indifferently.

"Well, thin, in that case, yez had better dig another hole an' throw it in there!"

Patch Skull With Patient's Own Ribs.

The replacing of destroyed portions of skull with layers of cartilage taken from the patient's own ribs is one of the latest methods of healing war injuries. H. Warren Woodroffe, surgeon of the Ulster Volunteer hospital in France, describes the method which has been successfully tried on a number of severely wounded men.

Cutting down to the ribs parallel to the breast bone, the surgeon slices off thin layers of the cartilage which attaches the bony ribs to the breast bone. These are held in the gap caused by the destruction of the skull after the scalp has been turned back. The scalp is then stitched back in place. Within a few weeks, instead of having no protection to the underlying brain, a hard layer of cartilage, firm though slightly elastic, is formed.

Daily Thought.

To thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man.—Shakespeare.

NO 'BRIGHT MONEY'

Mrs. Billtops Rises to Height of Self-Sacrifice.

She Had a "Good Thing" in Her Arrangement with the Partner of Her Joys and Sorrows, but Patriotism Came First.

"Something unexpected has happened," said Mr. Billtops. "Something quite unexpected.

"You know, for years I have been giving Mrs. Billtops all my bright money. Whenever I got a bright dime or quarter or half I simply turned it over to Mrs. Billtops.

"There might be weeks when I would not get a single bright coin; but there would be other weeks in which I would receive in change a considerable number. Altogether these bright coins provided for Mrs. B. a tidy bit of revenue, and I am sure it was as great a pleasure for me to turn them over to Mrs. Billtops as it was for her to receive them, though once this bright money proposition did give me a little scare.

"I dropped into a candy store one day to get some candy for Mrs. Billtops and there in change for a $5 bill I received two bright dimes and four absolutely spick and span bright new $1 bills!

"Well, now, there was something to make you stop and think. Under our understanding I was to give Mrs. Billtops all 'bright money.' It is true that by that I understood bright coins, and I had no doubt that Mrs. Billtops did, too, but the promise from me was of all 'bright money' and on a strict interpretation, which I did not desire to evade, there was nothing for me to do but to turn over with the two bright dimes those four bright dollars. Which I did.

"But Mrs. Billtops declined to receive them.

"'No, Ezra,' she said, 'no. We both understood bright money to mean bright coins, and we will go not by the letter of the contract but by the spirit. Ezra, you keep the $4.'

"Which I did, and I was always glad she settled it that way, for the opposite interpretation of my obligation might sometimes have subjected me to considerable inconvenience.

"Suppose I should some day have gone into a candy store and laid down not a $5 bill but a $1,000 bill and received in change $999.20 all in bright money, which by the contract I should have been required to turn over to Mrs. Billtops. Why, I have seen the time when handing over that amount of money in that way would have cramped me quite some.

"But never have I failed to hand over all bright coins, year after year continuously, until yesterday, when that something unexpected happened when Mrs. Billtops said to me:

"'Ezra, no more bright money. I have always been glad to get it for the sentiment of it and for the use I could make of it, but you need the money more now and from now on you keep it and use it as you would any other money and I will deny myself that luxury. No more bright money, Ezra, from now until the end of the war.'

"Unexpected it certainly was, but still it was only what you would have expected her to do, if you knew Mrs. Billtops."

Food—After the War.

Whatever other blessings peace may bring it will not bring instant relief to the masses who are now distressed by food shortage and its natural consequence, high prices. There will be as many mouths to feed when the armies are demobilized as there are now. It is true that the fare of the soldiers in most European countries is more liberal than that of the civil population, but no statesman will take comfort in the prospect of masses of disbanded soldiers reduced to the level of civil undernourishment. And besides the civil populations that are now enduring semi-starvation uncomplainingly, recognizing that no relief can be expected while the energies of their government are engrossed by war, will be far less patient when peace returns. More food, not less, will be required in peace.—The New Republic.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MARCH 22, 1918.

It certainly is a shock to moral sensibility to find the foremost advocate of what he pronounces to be a great moral issue announcing that Speaker Sweet of the Assembly "can now put ratification over," if he will quit playing politics. Dishonest deals invariably are said to have been "put over," because the term implies undue advantage. Is it necessary to employ such means to "put over" a great moral issue as the Rev. William H. Anderson seems to imply by his language in reference to pending Prohibition legislation in the Assembly? Manners have changed in nineteen hundred years; new issues have arisen, but moral principle is the same now as then, because right is changeless. The only "Perfect Man" the world has known, never found it necessary to "put over" the principles he taught; which is one reason why He is remembered when others are forgotten.

TOO MUCH HOT AIR

The third Liberty Loan will be launched April sixth, the first anniversary of the United States' entrance into war, and if the suggestions of Mayor Cornelius Burns, President of the State Conference of Mayors, are carried out there will be a big demonstration in every city which will include:

1. Assembling of people in Armories at 11 a. m. to hear reading of proclamation, speeches by the respective Mayors and patriotic songs by school children.

2 Church bells and factory whistles to be sounded at noon

3. Street parade of Liberty Loan Committees, school children and civic organizations in afternoon.

The first anniversary of our country's entrance into war finds us with insufficient supplies for our forces abroad and the echo still sounding of Fuel Administrator Garfield for having issued Fuelless Mondays orders last winter by whose operation factories were compelled to shut down The demand from military sources everywhere is for America to "speed up" industries and by furnishing ample supplies promptly to shorten the war.

Yet in the face of this plea it is suggested that every city in New York State shall lessen production still more by stopping work to listen to speeches and watch a parade Parades and hot air emanations of men anxious to hear themselves talk do not win wars. Parades of soldiers excite patriotic fervor and bring home the realities of war, but other parades are not wanted. The men who will be asked to subscribe to Liberty Bonds are asked to lose a day's wages which might go toward buying bonds. Why not have a holiday every day while the Liberty Loan campaign lasts? Thing of the glorious help it would be in producing supplies which our soldiers are asking for.

GENTLE TINKLES.

Perhaps State Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson was in jest when he sponsored the Senate bill which would require all cats to wear a bell and permit the killing of all cats found unbelled or caught in the act of killing a bird, but he has the satisfaction of knowing that the public takes a deep interest in the measure and has written both in commendation and condemnation. The bill applies equally to the pet house-cat which wears a pink ribbon bow as to the hungry feline which spends its time near the neighbors' garbage can No cat is immune, which is proper because favoritism shown to the cat family might by degrees be extended to other classes of living beings, including man. The majority of people who favor the bill are those whose slumber has been disturbed by cat concerts on the back fence. Belling the cats won't break up the concert, however, and the faithful brick or bootjack will continue to be employed for that purpose. If the bells have a dulcet, soothing tone, their gentle tinkle will lessen the inharmonious caterwauling of the unmusically inclined cat, and in many instances should prove a desirable feature. Music records for the talking machine or player piano are always in favor if they have an accompaniment of chimes, and church soloists obtain most effective results from the church chimes.. Cats wearing bells will warn birds of their danger, but bird-catching is not the chief end and aim in life of any cat which much prefers the succulent mice and rats, which infest every neighborhood occasionally and some neighborhoods continually. "Feed your cats and they catch no birds," wrote one cat-owner. "I had twenty-nine cats and kittens to protect my chickens from sparrows and rats and they never touched a chick or bird during the year I was in the poultry business" "You ought to live on rats and have them run over your bed every night to amuse you" wrote one correspondent. If cats are belled, it might be a good plan also to bell the rats.

A Nasal Calamity.

Between Edinburgh and Carlisle a brawny, middle-aged Scotsman entered a train one day His Highland garb, and the fact that he took snuff freely from a large box and offered it to others to "help their ain sels," attracted the attention of the other occupants of the compartment.

At Newcastle an Englishman whom nature had gifted with an extremely large nose, joined the other travelers He seated himself opposite the Scot, who beamed with pleasure and at once offered his snuffbox When the Englishman declined it, the astonished Scot said:

"Dinna ye snuff?"

"No," answered the Saxon

As He Saw It.

The average foreigner can rarely comprehend the geographical area of the United States, as was quite fully illustrated by the Englishman and his valet, who had been traveling due west from Boston for five days. At the end of the fifth day master and servant were seated in the smoking car, and it was observed that the man was gazing steadily and thoughtfully out of the window. Finally his companion became curious "William," said he, "of what are you thinking?"

"I was just thinking, sir, about the discovery of Hamerica," replied the valet "Columbus didn't do such a wonderful thing, after all, when he found this country, did he, now, sir? Hafter all's said an' done, 'ow could 'e 'elp it."—Everybody's Magazine

SUFFERED FOR HIS COUNTRY

Silas Deane, First American Diplomatic Agent, Received Harsh Treatment From Government.

Silas Deane, the first diplomatic agent of the United States, was born at Groton, Mass., close to 200 years ago. He became a merchant and was a delegate to the first Continental congress. In the spring of 1776 he was sent to France as a secret diplomatic agent. He posed as a merchant from Bermuda, and upon his arrival in Paris sought an interview with Count de Vergennes, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who refused to receive him. Deane was reduced to the direst poverty and was ejected by his landlady.

Subsequent American ambassadors have complained of the lack of suitable embassies, but Deane was reduced to a point where he had to accept poor lodgings from a sympathetic Frenchman. Eventually he was given an audience with Vergennes and began the diplomatic relations which eventually resulted in the French alliance. In 1777 Deane was recalled.

In the bitter controversy which followed his recall Thomas Paine revealed the fact that supplies furnished the colonies had been furnished by the French government. This was considered a diplomatic indiscretion and it cost Paine his place as secretary of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Deane, driven into poverty and exile, died in England in 1789. Half a century later his claim for his services abroad was adjusted by congress and a large sum was paid his heirs.

ALL MADE EQUAL BY DEATH

No Democracy Ever Conceived Is at All Comparable to That of the Tomb.

In the democracy of the dead all men at last are equal. There is neither rank nor station nor prerogative in the republic of the grave. At this fatal threshold the philosopher ceases to be wise, and the song of the poet is silent. Dives relinquishes his millions and Lazarus his rags. The poor man is as rich as the richest, and the rich man is as poor as the pauper. The creditor loses his usury and the debtor is acquitted of his obligation. There the proud man surrenders his dignities, the politician his honors, the wordling his pleasures; the invalid needs no physician, and the laborer rests from unrequited toil.

Here, at last, is nature's final decree in equity. The wrongs of time are redressed. Injustice is expiated, the irony of fate is refuted; the unequal distribution of wealth, honor, capacity, pleasure and opportunity which makes life such a cruel and inexplicable tragedy, ceases in the realm of death. The strongest there has no supremacy, and the weakest needs no defense. The mightiest captain succumbs to that invincible adversary who disarms alike the victor and the vanquished.—John J. Ingalls.

Sprouts After 1,000 Years.

At the Zensui Temple, Iwane village, Koga-gun, Shiga Prefecture, a very ancient wooden idol of Vaisravana was opened four years ago and some rice that had reposed therein fully ten centuries was removed and planted. The seeds germinated and the rice grown therefrom appears to be similar in all respects to that of the present day. The yield was large and the crop for next year from this seed is expected to be excellent.

Vaisravana is the God of Treasure. When the statue was repaired a bag of coarse flaxen textile was exhumed containing rice seeds, with a piece of paper bearing the following inscription, in Chinese: "This image has been engraved for the peace of the world. If any one of later generations opens it, he should put in new seeds." The Tokyo Academy of Fine Art pronounces the image and its contents of great antiquity—at least 1,000 years old.

STATE ORGANIZED FOR BOND SALES

Preparations Sufficiently Advanced to Enable Liberty Loan Workers to Start Great Drive on Time.

LOCALIZED RESPONSIBILITY BASIS OF THE CAMPAIGN

Arrangements Perfected for Individual Canvass Both in the Rural and Industrial Sections of Reserve District.

Preparations for the Third Liberty Loan campaign throughout the Second Federal Reserve District have been advanced with such rapidity that the working organization will be ready to take up the work as soon as the great drive opens.

In one particular the campaign outside of New York city will differ materially from the work done in the previous loan campaigns, the basic principle, as explained by the campaign chiefs, being "localized responsibility." The purpose will be to reach every possible purchaser of the bonds and to spare no effort in doing so.

Many complexities in the organization have been adjusted to meet this demand for localized responsibility. They can be understood best by a summary of the work to be done in the rural districts. Each county has been divided into sections under the supervision of individual chairmen. These in turn have provided for canvassing each locality on a house-to-house basis, the canvassing to be done not by outsiders, but by men living in the particular districts, men who are known and who are in many cases intimate with the people to whom the appeal will be made. It is believed this specific appeal will be much more effective in selling bonds than any attempt on the part of outsiders to convince residents of these sections of the necessity and the advantage of taking liberal amounts of the securities.

In the industrial sections of New York and New Jersey an equally detailed canvassing scheme will be carried out. Steps have been taken in every important industrial organization to have the Liberty Bond campaign brought forcibly to the notice of the workers. The work in this field will be both educational and of a patriotic nature.

Despite the extraordinary efforts to handle the campaign on an individual basis, the opinion has been expressed by many of the Liberty Loan workers that conditions for the sale of the Third Liberty Loan are much more propitious in the rural districts than in the previous loans. News coming from the American front in France has served not only as an inspiration to patriotic citizens, but has emphasized among all of them the vastness of the struggle and the great sacrifices which are necessary both in a material and a moral sense.

On the opening day of the loan the great machine will be set in motion and will be constantly in motion until the work is done. The preliminary work has been so thorough that it is expected very large sales will be made in many centers and that many towns will win the Liberty Loan Honor Flag.

"Farmers' Fighting Spirit!"

John Morgan Wing, life member of the New York State Agricultural Society, in a statement made to the Liberty Loan Committee on the "Farmer's Fighting Spirit" says:

"America as a nation has 'arrived,' and, though modesty may not allow us to state baldly our position in the line of great nations, let every one of us honestly ask ourselves the question, 'What is our position?' The answer will be big—perhaps could not be bigger.

"We started our journey in a small way with Liberty as our emblem, our farmers firing the guns, for it seems that Liberty must ever be inaugurated with gunfire.

"The wonders that have been wrought in the past by our farmers we know will again be wrought.

"The Liberty standard is once more lifted aloft, for there are those abroad who would rob us of the fruits of the early sacrifices; and our farmers are going to win the fight for us yes, and most of their fighting will be right down on the farm! The produce of the earth, which are the sinews of war, will be supplied; their men, when needed, will be supplied to the extent that they can be spared, and, lastly, their money will be invested in Liberty Bonds."

Liberty Bonds buy safety for soldiers and for you.

Would Have Only Pleasant Memory.

"I never," a wife told me, Margaret E. Sangster writes in the Christian Herald, "say an unpleasant thing to my husband when he is leaving for work in the morning. If he's done something inconsiderate that has annoyed me, I forget it. If there is any little worry to confide in him, I keep it for another time. Life, it seems to me, is very involved in the city, very uncertain. There are so many trucks and cars on the street, so many accidents every day that I would hate to think that my husband, in the midst of all the hurry and worry, carried an unpleasant picture of me—a picture that I had created! I would hate to think, if anything did happen, that my face, when he saw it for the last time, had a frown on it. That's why I smile at him always when I say good-by in the morning and let nothing but love shine out of my eyes!"

Uses Chinese Wood Oil.

Tung-yu, or wood oil, is widely used throughout China as a paint oil for outside purposes. As a drying oil it excels even linseed oil. One of its greatest local markets is found among the boatmen, who never paint their boats, but coat them with the cruder grades of wood oil, which not only gives the woodwork a bright, lustrous finish, but also acts as an excellent preservative. When certain mineral substances known as t'utzu and t'o-shen are added to the wood oil and the resulting mass is heated for about two hours, kwangyu, or wood oil varnish, is produced. This wood oil varnish is used as a waterproofing substance for silks, pongees, etc., and also as an ornamental varnish when coloring materials are added.

Be Careful With Electricity.

Some safety hints for the wise, which are intended to guard against serious accidents and a possible loss of life, are being sent out broadcast by the electric light companies. From them may be selected the following: Do not cover an electric globe with paper or cloth. It may start a fire. Do not hang an ordinary lamp cord over a nail or metal work. Do not leave a cord connected when you are through with it. Do not touch any wire that is down on the ground, whether it is an electric, telephone or guy wire. In an emergency, remove a wire with an instrument equipped with a wooden handle, keeping the full length of the handle between yourself and the wire. —Popular Science Monthly.

Bicycle Remains Unsung.

Coaching has its Nimrod, the turf its Druid, the locomotive, nay, the upstart motor car, has its heroics written in the whirlwind vein of "Tamburlaine the Great," with due accompaniment of gong and cymbals. But the bicycle, in the many years of its popular existence, has found not a single literary champion. It has passed into a busy world unsung. The word "cycle," it has been decided by one school of thought, has proved a deterrent; the "bike" of booking office parlance is more ignominious still. Had it been called a pair-wheel, or a foot-wheel, or, as Poet Barnes suggested, a "wheel saddle," there might have been some hope for it.

Man's Index Finger.

Man's hand is arranged as to finger lengths like the monkey's. The primitive plan was for the third finger to be the longest, the fourth the next in length, the second the next, the fifth or little finger the next, while the thumb is shortest of all. The editor of the Journal of American Heredity declares that it is very commonly discovered that the first or index finger is as long or longer than the fourth, and this is doubtless due to the functional importance of the index finger. "I am not sure," he says, "that it should not be considered as the typical human condition."

Origin of Blizzard.

Blizzard is undoubtedly a word of American origin, but it is much older than suggested. In Amersham (Eng.) churchyard today there is a tomb of the Blizard family and people of that name still reside in the village of Chalfont St. Giles. A man of this name accompanied William Penn to the new world. This Blizard, it is said, developed very unsociable habits and settled far away from his fellows in the remote Northwest. Now a northwestern snowstorm is the most disagreeable thing there is about the whole climate, and Mr. Blizard, being so unpleasant a person to his neighbors, his name was adopted to describe the objectionable type of weather which blew from his direction.

ROAD BUILDING

NATION-WIDE BOOST IS SEEN

All States of Union Have Availed Themselves of Opportunity Offered by Government.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That the better roads movement is receiving a nation-wide boost is shown by the fact that all the states of the Union have availed themselves of the opportunity of participating in the benefits of the federal aid road act, which appropriated $75,000,000 for the construction of post roads and $10,000,000 for forest roads, according to the report of the director of the office of public roads and rural engineering, United States department of agriculture. That the passage of the act has stimulated road building is shown by the fact that in 1916, there were approximately $41,000,000 of state funds expended for all highway purposes, and it is estimated that in the calendar year 1917, the aggregate expenditures of state funds for this purpose will be at least $60,000,000. A number of the states have made specific appropriations to meet federal aid dollar for dollar. Among these are New York, Illinois, Michigan, Rhode Island, Nevada, Iowa, Florida and Vermont.

BUILD ROAD CULVERTS RIGHT

Waste of Time and Money Unless Work Is Done on Approved Plan Under Competent Direction.

No culvert that is improperly built is safe or economical. On the contrary, it is a waste of money to spend it on such work unless the work is well done on an approved plan under competent direction. There must be calculation as to the volume of water the culverts are to carry off in rainy season and flood time, not in dry weather, and as to the durability of the material used in their construction. There can be no skimping on culverts or bridges or drainage without waste. It is better to have these three things permanent and adequate than to have an expensive form of road surfacing if a choice must be made. The man who built his house on shifting sand instead of solid rock has been regarded for centuries as the prince of fools.

AUTOMOBILE IS BIG FACTOR

Present War Has Found in Roads and Motor Cars Means of Moving Great Numbers of Men.

Two conditions of civic life emphasize the necessity for good roads. One is war. The Roman roads were built because Rome had vast armies to move. The present European war has kept thousands upon thousands of men busy in eastern Prussia and western Poland building roads in territories where before there were only swampy trails. Many of the roads in Belgium and northern France were built during previous wars, when vast armies must be moved quickly, so that the present war has found in roads and motorcars the means of moving great armies as never before. Good highways have made possible a rapid transportation of troops which is astonishing the entire world.

IMPORTANCE OF ROAD DRAGS

More to the Work Than Standing on Implement Holding Reins Over Team of Horses.

Perhaps the ease of dragging the road and the simplicity of the King road drag has been overemphasized. At any rate, there is more to road dragging than standing on a drag and holding the reins over a team of horses. And there is more to drag building than merely pinning together of the two slabs of a split log. On the other hand, almost any sort of driving down the road with the roughest possible pair of slabs, slapped together in any old way, will change the ordinary road for the better.

How to buy real hosiery Satisfaction

The right way is to buy hosiery that exactly fits your feet and your needs.

If your feet burn, ache, and quickly tire, maybe it's the fault of misfit hosiery that gathers, binds, or quickly tears.

Come in today and buy a pair of Ipswich socks or stockings. Over 50,000,000 pairs were sold last year. Made in styles that range all the way from sturdy, cushiony, 25-cent cotton socks to the beautiful fibre silk and lisle flare-top stockings at 75 cents.

Determining Age of Planets.

A novel idea in estimating the physical condition of planets was put forth by M. Veronnet before the Academie des Sciences at a recent meeting in Paris. He based it upon a calculation of the quantity of water that rocks such as granite and porphyry absorb before becoming perfectly dry.

He said that on the moon all water has been completely absorbed by slow diffusion as the rocks gradually cooled. Venus is still surrounded by a thick layer of vapor, while no water has yet been condensed on the surface of Mercury, this planet being still in a condition in which its geological life has not begun, and consequently no clouds have yet formed on its surface.

M. Veronnet calculates that the rocks of our earth now contain absorbed water which would cover the earth to an average depth of about 400 metres.

Titled Lady as Shoemaker.

It is an interesting fact that, although the women of the United Kingdom have invaded most employments that formerly were followed chiefly by men, the shoemaking trade has not experienced much change in this respect. Yet, something over a hundred years ago, shoemaking was one of the "employments of high society" in London. Lady Sarah Spencer, in a letter to her brother, written about the year 1808, says: "In the evening we divide our time between music and shoemaking, which is now the staple trade of the family. I am today in a state of great vanity, for I have made a pair of shoes —there is news for you. So if all other trades fail I shall certainly establish myself, cross-legged, at the corner of an alley to earn a livelihood in the midst of leather, awls and hammers."

Paint From Hands.

Paint and varnish can easily be removed from one's hands by first rubbing any kind of grease or lard well into hands, then washing them with warm water and soap.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

Again that eventful date has arrived and passed when the students of the high school are made either sad or happy by the marks on their report cards. It is no easy matter to receive eighty in every subject for many times students are apt in mathematics and science, but dull in English and the foreign languages or just the opposite, apt in English and the foreign languages. To receive mark all eighty-five or above is extremely good work, and to receive 90 or above in every subject is extraordinarily good. Still that list of students who have received ninety or above has not changed in numbers and the other lists have remained almost as high in numbers. The students who have worked hard enough to receive these marks are as follows:

Classification of pupils who are doing very satsfactory work. The grades are taken from the recent report cards.

Tuesday afternoon immediately after school a large crowd of high school students witnessed in the high school gymnasium a basket ball game that had been previously proclaimed by the juniors as theirs but the Midgets came, saw and conquered. They avenged in every way the wrongs of the Seniors by beating the Juniors by far greater score than they defeated the Seniors. The game was to easy a victory for the Midgets to be called exciting although the Midgets amused the spectators by scrambling all over the Juniors, thereby causing the Juniors to leave the floor in anything but a sweet disposition. The lion Zeh, was no match for Kirchner. His roars went over the top of Kirchner's head, and were of no avail. To make a long story short the Midgets defeated the Juniors so badly that they quite crushed their proud spirit. The line-ups were as follows:

Power of the Spirit in Deafness.

The central thought which comes from my experience with deafness is that remedy—recompense. There, as elsewhere, is the natural law—that nature seeks always to balance itself. The only irreparable disaster in deafness is that one which would despoil the spirit—the will; and here again, as was shown in depression, it is within the personality, within the bounds and terms of our own understanding, that exist the laws which reharmonize the discordant condition and reinvest the mind with its conscious power to dominate the forces and events of life. —Margaret Baldwin, in Atlantic.

New Material for Paper Pulp.

Experiments in the use of lalang grass for paper pulp have been carried out in Australia. There are millions of tons of lalang grass growing in Queensland. It produces three crops a year, and is considered a curse to the country. It resembles esparto grass and, when dried, yields as high as 60 per cent of first-class paper-making pulp.

NEW SPRING STYLE

Coat and Skirt, an Evidence of Grace and Simplicity.

Women—all women—still want to look attractive and to make the best of themselves, but there is to be no extravagance, either in actual expenditure or in general style. And just here, observes a prominent fashion authority, the good sense of our Parisian dressmakers makes itself felt. The new spring styles are models of grace and simple charm, in fact, many of them are so very simple in outline that any clever girl could copy them, perfectly, with the aid of a needlewoman or "the little dressmaker round the corner."

For example, take the charming model of this spring coat and skirt. It is a Worth model made of dull blue oatmeal cloth with many rows of machine-stitching down in thick cherry-red silk on the hem of the skirt and also on the coat. At the waist there is a smart girdle made of cherry-red silk cord, finished off with long tassels. This was a simple little costume intended for morning wear, and it could be copied in any color and any soft material. If desired the machine stitching could match the dress material, the girdle, of course, following suit. A particularly smart spring suit might be made from this model, in navy monks' cloth with a machine stitching in bordeaux-red, with girdle to match. Or the costume would look very elegant and attractive in black camel's hair cloth, with b ck silk stitchings and a printed silk ing for the coat.

It was expressed in cherry-red felt and by way of trimming there was a fan-shaped ornament made of dark blue horse-hair jutting out from the narrow brim at the back. This hat had a notably large crown and quite a narrow brim. This is an idea which seems certain of success. Hats of this order must be pulled well down on the head, covering the hair except at the sides. On young and pretty girls these hats are exceedingly attractive, but they are not for every one.

WOOL COAT, YARN TRIMMING

Apparently we all have grown so used to knitting that we just cannot stop doing it. At least, one is justified in such an inference from the number of knitted accessories and the forms of knitted trimming one sees nowadays in the shops. To begin with, the vogue of the knitted wool sweater is by no means finished. Women stop in their war work of making socks and mufflers now and then to knit a sweater for themselves of some gay yarn.

Perhaps the newest thing is the woolen coat with trimmings of knitted yarn. Some of these coats are very smart. They are expensive, too, for, of course, the knitted work is hand done, and they also are a novelty. One of a dark, dull green cloth shows sleeves, pockets and a waistcoat front of knitted green worsted. Others have only collar, cuffs and belt or collar, cuffs and pockets of the worsted work, and a good many have vests or waistcoats of it.

We Wonder

"Here's a question I'd like to propound," remarked the Observer of Events and Things: "Does a bowlegged soldier become knock-kneed when he faces the enemy for the first time?"

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen Costigan who died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Michael Nugent, of Hill street, Saugerties, on Tuesday was held this morning at St. Mary's church. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery, Saugerties.

Lillian E., wife of William O. Dougherty died at her home, No. 29 Orchard street, Wednesday evening in her 23rd year. The funeral will be held from the late residence Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment in Montrepose cemetery.

The funeral of the late Watson Lewis, who died suddenly at his home, Elm street, Saugerties, on Sunday took place Thursday afternoon at his late home. Ulster Lodge, No. 193, F. & A. M., attended in a body. Right Worshipful C. N. DeWitt, past district deputy, grand master, of Kingston, delivered the oration. Rev. F. M. Turrentine of the Methodist church officiated. The remains were taken by auto cortege to Mt. Marion cemetery for interment.

The funeral of Miss Helen R. McCardle took place this morning from her late residence at 9 o'clock and from St. Joseph's church at 9:30 where a requiem mass was offered for the repose of her soul by the Rev. George Murdock. Father Murdock spoke with feeling of the Christian character of the deceased and urged the mourners and friends pray that God might grant them such a death bed. He also accompanied the remains to St. Mary's cemetery and officiated at the services there. The floral offerings were many and beautiful. The bearers were William McManus, William Carr, John McCardle, Thomas McCardle, cousins of the deceased and William Roedell and Cornelius Ryan.

Mary Frances Halloran, wife of T. Joseph O'Grady, of Shokan, died Thursday evening at the Benedictine Sanitarium after a brief illness. Besides her husband she is survived by one son, James Winston O'Grady, her mother, in Ireland, three sisters, Mrs. Pease and Mrs. Feeley of Springfield, Mass., and Miss Agnes Halloran of this city. Mrs. O'Grady was a graduate of the Benedictine Sanitarium Training School, having been graduated with the class of 1912. After her graduation she was in charge of the Ashokan hospital at Brown Station in which position she continued until her marriage to Mr. O'Grady. She has a large circle of friends in this city who mourn her loss. The body was taken from the sanitarium this morning to the 11:05 West Shore train and sent to Springfield, Mass., where services and burial will take place Monday.

William N. Burhans, of Saugerties, died Thursday afternoon at his home on Partition street of hardening of the arteries, his illness dating since Christmas of last year. He was born June 17, 1851, at Flatbush, now town of Ulster. The greater part of his life was spent in Saugerties where he was actively engaged in business until his retirement a few years ago. For several years he was with Burhans & Brainard, blue stone dealers, then with his father-in-law, the late Uriah Van Etten; for several years supervisor of the town of Saugerties; conducted a successful coal and lumber business which is now succeeded by the Saugerties Coal & Lumber Co. He was an efficient postmaster of Saugerties, serving two terms; filled the office of justice of the peace and was one of the town assessors at the time of death; he was a past master of Ulster Lodge, No. 193, F. & A. M.; past grand of Confidence Lodge, No. 51, I. O. O. F., and an ex-chief engineer of the Saugerties fire department, and the first worthy patron of Emmanuel Chapter, O. E. S. He is survived by a brother, Robert, of Pasadena, Cal. The funeral will take place at his late home Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, with interment in Mountain View cemetery.

ESOPUS.

Esopus, March 22.—Mrs. Stewart of Kingston, mother of Walter Stewart of this village, with Mrs. Henry Hartsch of the above city and Mrs. Helen Worth of Whiteport, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stewart on Wednesday of this week.

The pupils of the village school have been given their Junior Red Cross pins as a reward for the payment of the sum apportioned this district. As previously mentioned the amount was in excess of the apportionment, which fact causes the pupils and teacher, Miss Margaret Sheehan, to feel well satisfied with their efforts.

Mrs. Peter Scheide and Edward Lundy are canvassing for the Knights of Columbus war fund and from the present outlook we prophesy a successful ending to their efforts.

DAMAGE BY MUSKRATS

They Are Responsible for Considerable Injury to Crops.

Little Animals Are Most Valuable for Fur and Should Be Protected and Trapped Where They Are Not Troublesome.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Muskrats are responsible for considerable damage to growing crops, irrigation ditches, mill dams, etc. They are the most valuable fur animals in the United States and when they are not troublesome should be protected and trapped for fur, but in some localities it is necessary to employ measures to reduce their numbers or prevent them from causing injury. This can usually be done by trapping, and the sale of the pelts makes such activities profitable. Often crops may be protected by the erection of wire-mesh fences between them and the marsh or pond where the animals live. Such fences should reach at least six inches beneath the surface of the ground to prevent the muskrats burrowing under. In narrow waterways barrel traps have proved efficient in catching large numbers of these animals.

Injury by Muskrats.

By erecting more permanent works, owners of embankments, dams, etc., may guard against injuries to their property by muskrats. A more general use of concrete, for example, has greatly minimized such troubles. The more liberal use of gravel or coarse sand for the surface of embankments has been found effective, since the animals will not burrow in soil that fills the hole as fast as they open it.

Destruction of muskrats, where this is desirable, as well as their protection, which is in most cases advisable, is discussed in a recent farmer's bulletin, No. 869, of the United States department of agriculture.

MORE COMMON GRAIN PESTS

United States Department of Agriculture Is Endeavoring to Standardize Fumigants.

Anticipating an unusual prevalence of the more common grain weevils in stored grains this winter, the bureau of entomology of the United States department of agriculture is exercising especial efforts to standardize fumigants for these pests and determine methods of application on a large scale to prevent their damage as much as possible. Reports to the bureau are to the effect that persons who are storing grain may expect more weevils than usual this winter.

SPREAD MANURE OVER FIELDS

When This Method Is Not Practicable It Should Be Piled Under Shelter of Some Kind.

The best way to handle manure is to spread it over the fields as promptly as possible. The fresh manure is far better on the land it is to enrich than put in piles in the barn. When it is not practical to spread the manure as fast as it accumulates in the barn it may be piled under shelter till such a time as it may be spread. It is best to have a firm surface to pile it on.

START CAULIFLOWER IN BOX

Cauliflower plants should be started early in boxes of rich soil; the sweet corn should be sown in hills three feet each way, and when the cauliflower plants are large enough transplant between rows of sweet corn in deep holes two or three feet apart and with both crops plant but a few rows at a time to provide a long cropping season, so cauliflower will follow corn for table use, being a late maturing crop.

ASPARAGUS BED READY EARLY

Pecuniary Advantages to Be Reaped Sufficient to Satisfy Most Ambitious Gardener.

An asparagus bed is ready for use in very early spring, when everyone craves fresh vegetables. It is easy to grow after once started, and yet an asparagus bed is rarely found on a farm, though the pecuniary advantages to be reaped from it are sufficient to satisfy the most ambitious gardener.

DRINKING WATER FOR FOWLS

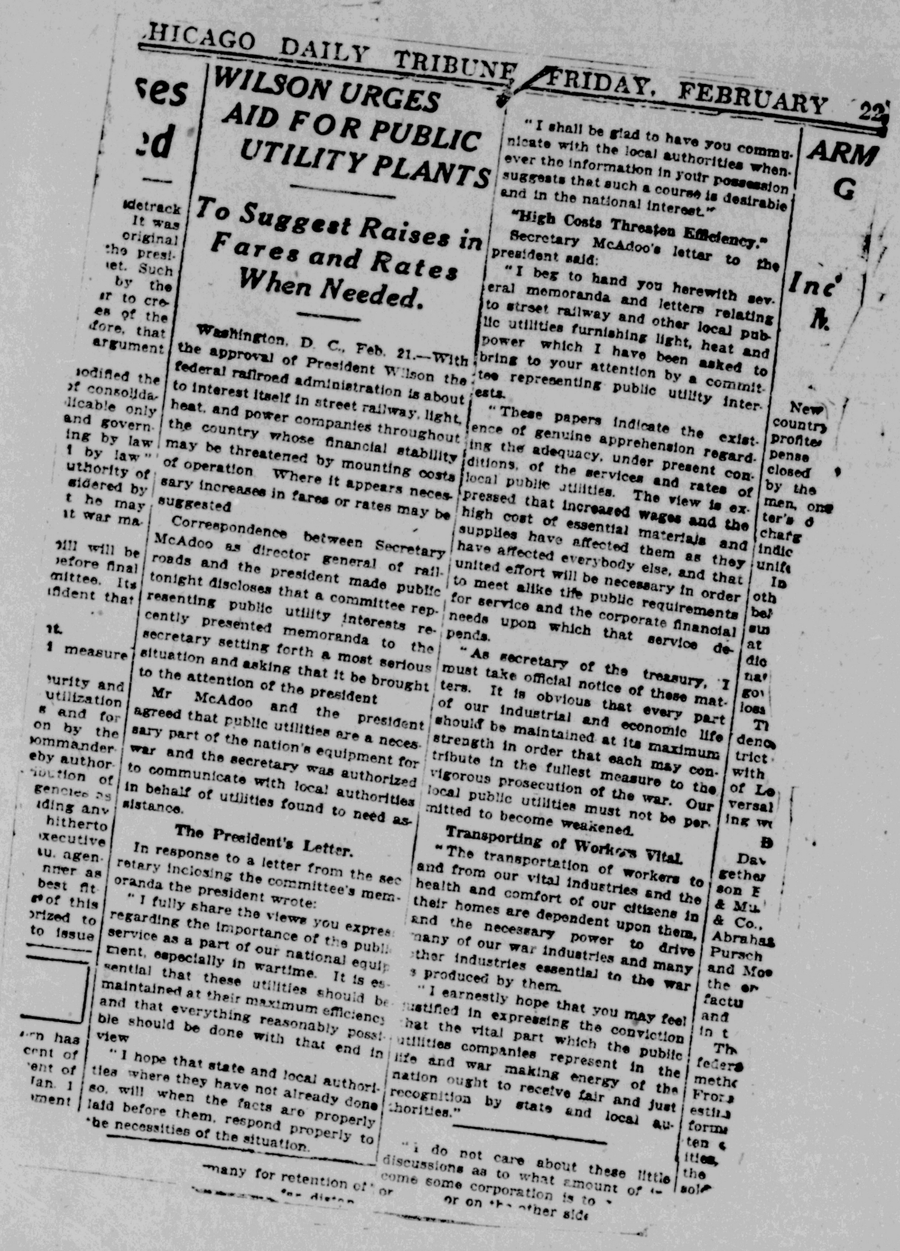
In Extremely Cold Weather Chill Should Be Taken Off—Furnish Twice Each Day.

Drinking water almost at the freezing point or water with ice in it, hinders egg production. In extreme weather, warm water (the ordinary supply with the chill taken off) should be furnished at least twice a day and three times a day if convenient.

Advice to Sentimental.

When a fellow's in love he might as well go right up to her and make a fool of himself first as last. Anything is better than holding it in until he gets spontaneous combustion.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

The Public Utility Situation
As Viewed by Pres. Wilson and Sec. McAdoo



CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 22

WILSON URGES AID FOR PUBLIC UTILITY PLANTS

To Suggest Raises in Fares and Rates When Needed.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—With the approval of President Wilson the federal railroad administration is about to interest itself in street railway, light, heat, and power companies throughout the country whose financial stability may be threatened by mounting costs of operation. Where it appears necessary increases in fares or rates may be suggested.

Correspondence between Secretary McAdoo as director general of railroads and the president made public tonight discloses that a committee representing public utility interests recently presented memoranda to the secretary setting forth a most serious situation and asking that it be brought to the attention of the president.

Mr McAdoo and the president agreed that public utilities are a necessary part of the nation's equipment for war and the secretary was authorized to communicate with local authorities in behalf of utilities found to need assistance.

The President's Letter.

In response to a letter from the secretary inclosing the committee's memoranda the president wrote:

"I fully share the views you express regarding the importance of the public service as a part of our national equipment, especially in wartime. It is essential that these utilities should be maintained at their maximum efficiency and that everything reasonably possible should be done with that end in view.

"I hope that state and local authorities where they have not already done so, will when the facts are properly laid before them, respond properly to the necessities of the situation.

"I shall be glad to have you communicate with the local authorities whenever the information in your possession suggests that such a course is desirable and in the national interest."

"High Costs Threaten Efficiency."

Secretary McAdoo's letter to the president said:

"I beg to hand you herewith several memoranda and letters relating to street railway and other local public utilities furnishing light, heat and power which I have been asked to bring to your attention by a committee representing public utility interests.

"These papers indicate the existence of genuine apprehension regarding the adequacy, under present conditions, of the services and rates of local public utilities. The view is expressed that increased wages and the high cost of essential materials and supplies have affected them as they have affected everybody else, and that united effort will be necessary in order to meet alike the public requirements for service and the corporate financial needs upon which that service depends.

"As secretary of the treasury, I must take official notice of these matters. It is obvious that every part of our industrial and economic life should be maintained at its maximum strength in order that each may contribute in the fullest measure to the vigorous prosecution of the war. Our local public utilities must not be permitted to become weakened.

Transporting of Workers Vital.

"The transportation of workers to and from our vital industries and the health and comfort of our citizens in their homes are dependent upon them, and the necessary power to drive many of our war industries and many other industries essential to the war is produced by them.

"I earnestly hope that you may feel justified in expressing the conviction that the vital part which the public utilities companies represent in the life and war making energy of the nation ought to receive fair and just recognition by state and local authorities."

"I do not care about these little discussions as to what amount of ... come some corporation is to ... or on the other side ...

AMERICAN BUSINESS NOT "USUAL" NOW

Dwight W. Morrow, now on an important government mission, addressing the people of New Jersey on War Savings, said:

The War Savings movement simply repeats to the people of this country the solemn injunction which our President laid upon us all on the 15th day of last April:

"Let every man and every woman assume the duty of careful, provident use and expenditure as a public duty, as a dictate of patriotism which no one can now expect ever to be excused or forgiven for ignoring."

You may well ask me of what value it is to release labor unless it can find its way to the place where it is needed. That is a vital question for you farmers. It is a vital question for all essential industries. It is a peculiarly vital question for the released workers. Of course it is going to be a difficult task to get each man placed where he will be most valuable in the country's service. The department of labor of the government is already concerned with that question. It will be necessary to have employment agencies; it even may be necessary to do as they have done in England—to enlist labor volunteers, who will move from one part of the country to another. Entirely apart from anything that the government may be able to do, is it not well, however, for us all to remember that as a nation we have one great common stock of goods and services, that we should increase that stock as much as possible by efforts beyond anything that we have ever put forward before and that we should also slacken up as much as we reasonably can in our personal demands upon that common stock of goods and services?

Movies a Necessity.

The War Savings movement does not ask people to push themselves back into a civilization that we have outgrown. It asks that the productive capacity of the country be utilized to the utmost limit, but it asks that this productive capacity, by he voluntary co-operation of the entire people of the country, be directed as rapidly as possible to the diligent and efficient prosecution of the war. It is not a gloomy doctrine. It does not seek to lay down rules as to what is or is not a necessity for any individual man or woman or child. It recognizes the imperative need for good health, mental as well as physical. Some people in England in the earlier days of the war believed that it was waste to go to the moving picture shows. It is true that children saved their pennies by not going to the "movies," but men gradually realized that, after all, it was poor economy to contribute money for recreation and community exercises of one kind or another at the front and to have no relaxation at home, and the moving picture theaters in England today are doing a very large business. But running through all the moving picture shows there is some education upon the great issues of the war.

Man cannot live by bread alone! No one has suggested that the brass be taken out of the instruments of the regimental band in order to produce a few more cartridge cases. No one has suggested that the flag be cut up in order to make garments. Men are kept warm by other than material things. People who have spiritual as well as physical needs need no argument to prove that a flag can render greater service when waving aloft than when made into clothing. The War Savings movement asks for what the President of the United States asked in his Thanksgiving proclamation—"a reasonable and practical economy." It asks each to determine this economy for himself, to determine it with conscientious appreciation of his physical and mental and spiritual needs. It asks him to determine it also with an appreciation of his country's needs, with an appreciation of the sober fact that when he buys goods and services with his money he may be preventing the government from getting goods and services that are needed and needed badly at the front.

Can't Have "Business as Usual."

One must be blind to all that has gone on in the world in the last three years to think that we can have "business as usual." People have quit talking about business as usual in England. There are 5,000,000 men in uniform there. If you translate that into American terms it means that they have about the same proportion of their population under arms as we will have when 10,000,000 men are serving with the colors. How have they done it? They have recognized that England is not engaged in a usual business. Women have taken many places formerly occupied by men; women are driving taxicabs, tilling the soil, even working in the munitions factories. Of course there cannot and must not be business as usual in this country! Secretary McAdoo has seen the situation clearly. In his annual report, issued early in last December, he said:

"'Business as usual' cannot, of course, be adopted as the guiding principle in time of war. It is a wholly wrong theory and should find no advocacy or acceptance by the sensible and patriotic people of America. Business must be readjusted to the war making function of the nation."

The business of this whole country at the present time is war. That is not a usual business for this peace loving nation. It is a most unusual business—a business so unusual that we have never seen its like before; a business so unusual that if we conduct it properly, please God, we shall never see its like again.

Don't Have a Double Chin.

An investigator declares that the double chin can be controlled and very largely mitigated. It depends largely upon the carriage and pose of the head. The person who has a repeated chin, or is threatened with one, should recall and practice Dr. Edward Everett Hale's famous advice: "Look up, not down." The person who sits, or stands, or walks, with an erect body and keeps the chin up-tilted, can defy the crease and the fatty ridges.

HIS REALIZATION OF WAR

The man with the tall silk hat and the pin-striped trousers and the fur-collared overcoat stooped out of his limousine Monday in front of the downtown drug store, where he usually dismounts each morning to buy his day's supplies of real Havanas. He waved an airy hand at his chauffeur and squared his shoulders beneath the fur of the overcoat to the Crocker Land air. Everything was all right.

Then the man with the tall silk hat and the pin-striped trousers and the fur-collared overcoat strode on in toward the cigar counter and flung a dollar bill on the showcase. He noticed there were no lights in the humidors of the cases. Then he saw no clerks were there. Behind the drug counters he finally spied a man he knew.

"Let me have a half-dozen smokes," he said.

"Sorry, but nothin' doin' this morning," said the man he knew.

"Why—what's wrong here?"

"Not selling today. Fuel administration, you know."

Slowly a great lump rose in the throat of the man with the tall hat and the pin-striped trousers. Hurriedly he felt in all his pockets. Then he rushed out to see whether the auto had left for home. Then he hurried to another drug store. Then, sadly, he went to the office.

As he entered the door, the young $20-a-week clerk took his usual stogie from his mouth and exhaled a cloud of the bitter smoke that had long made him hated by the stenographers. The man with the tall hat hurried over to him.

"For heaven's sake, Johnny, let me have a stogie, will you?"

"Sorry, boss, but this is all I got. I found this un in my pocket this morning—left over from Sunday."

The man with the tall hat went in and sat down. He called his most rapid stenographer and began to dictate to her.

His first letter—it should have been purely about stocks and bonds—began like this:

Britain Leans to Decimal System.

The movement in England looking toward the adoption of the decimal system for currency, which has the backing of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, is gaining ground. The London Statist states that the association has resolved to press the matter upon the attention of the government and to urge the introduction of a bill in parliament. It is proposed to retain the sovereign as standard value of a thousand mills, the half sovereign 500 mills, the four shilling piece 200 mills, the two-shilling piece or florin 100 mills, the half florin, commonly known as the shilling, 50 mills, and the sixpence 25 mills. Of subsidiary coinage it is recommended to coin ten-mill pieces and five-mill pieces. Below these it is suggested that a four-mill, three-mill and two-mill piece also be coined, and if found desirable a coin representing one mill. As the farthing is so little used it is not regarded as likely that anything below the value of a half penny will be coined.

The Kitchen in War Time.

The private kitchen has got to go. It is scarcely possible to doubt that now. With gas and fuel at their present prices, and likely to mount steadily higher, the great majority, as winter advances, will certainly be driven to living in one room. The economy effected by that simple measure will be enormous, and it entails no very serious hardship, given a satisfactory arrangement of the cooking problem. That problem could be practically solved tomorrow by the voluntary surrender, even in a very limited degree, of the domestic isolation in which the British family lives. If every two households agree to dine together only, it would be more than half solved. It is a matter in which the merits of a voluntary system over any compulsory arrangement are more obvious even than usual. But if the public continues to set its face obstinately against it, the compulsion will certainly come. —London News.

Absorbent Cotton Twice Used.

Through the ingenuity of a French chemist who was struck by the fact that in the military hospitals of Paris alone about 4,400 pounds of absorbent cotton was used daily, a process has been developed which makes it possible to use soiled cotton a second time. The first step is the removal of all grease by boiling ten or twelve hours in a soda solution, or by treating it under pressure for three hours in a sealed container filled with the same solution. After this the cotton is thoroughly washed in a machine and all the moisture removed by placing it in a high-speed centrifugal drier. Drying is followed by bleaching with hypochlorine of lime and a second washing and drying. Finally the purified product is carded, packed and again sterilized.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Well Rehearsed.

The Bavarians in a captured trench the moment our fellows appeared automatically put up their hands, yelled, "Mercy, kamerad," and formed up into single files for passing into the cages, relates an English soldier. A stolid Tommy, noticing the precision with which they carried out the latter movement, exclaimed, "What organizers these Fritzes are. They even practiced surrender drill."

Completing a Cycle.

"Have you tried the substitutes for meat?"

"Yes, I'm waiting for prices to keep working up till I can eat meat again as a substitute for the substitutes."

Literal.

"Josh Billings said he was an honest man because jail life didn't agree with him." "That was frank, wasn't it?" "No, it was Josh. Never heard of Frank Billings."—Boston Transcript.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

Professor Dunbar gave the students a very instructive talk on Thursday morning, his theme being that the students should determine what their course in life was to be and use every opportunity that came in their way to attain their goal of success. When they desire a certain thing, go where that thing is kept to get it.

The A. A. Minstrels.

The night for the A. A. minstrels has arrived. Come and see them at the high school tonight at 8 o'clock.

They are the best yet. They will cheer you if you are sad. They will make you laugh and grow thin. If your business is poor come where you can forget it. The laugh will take the gloom out of your system.

More than this, the Athletic Association is the bank for the athletic teams. If they are financially well off the teams are successful. If they are broke the teams are unsuccessful. If the teams are unsuccessful the name Kingston is pulled down from the top of the ladder. Can you as patriotic citizens of America and loyal Kingstonians permit such a catastrophe to occur? Impossible.

Parents, you are cordially invited to come and visit the high school, to come and see how your children act when they are out. Make believe you are young again and come enjoy a good laugh with kiddies. They will appreciate it. You will enjoy it.

Tonight, high school auditorium, 8 o'clock, A. A. Minstrels show. Dancing afterwards for students and alumni and all those present.

The program is as follows:

Mason Dixie Line, Opening Chorus.
Goodbye Broadway, Channing Clapp
Smile, Smile, Smile ....Kenneth Zeh
Wild, Wild Woman.....Bob Adams
After the War ....Milford Douglas
Whistlin' Coon .....H. F. Dunbar
When the Bells in the Light House
Ring Ding Dong....Russel Dana
Specialty......Prickly Heat Quartet
Long Boy ....Harry Connelly
Rambling Rose....Glenford Krause
Star Spangled Banner............
Closing Chorus.
Orchestra ....Selected
Dialogue—Rosenthal & Cooper.
Prof H. F. Dunbar, director.
Dana, interlocutor.

Endmen—Dunbar, Howard, Muller, Kirchner, Adams, Gibson.

Circle—Bishop, Zeh, P. Ryan, E. Ryan, Connelly, Krause, Vogt, Clapp.

TABASCO HEIGHTS.

Tabasco Heights, March 22.—The auction at Jacob Gorseline's on Wednesday was largely attended. Mr. Gorseline and family will move to Pataukunk this week. They will be greatly missed as they have always lived in this place and were good neighbors and we all wish them the best of luck in their new home.

The young people of this place, who are employed at Cornwall, are expected home for Easter.

Our teacher, Miss C. M. Kolb, was pleasantly entertained on Saturday and Sunday last at the home of Mrs. W. H. Gorseline.

Jerry Van Kleeck is moving on his farm he purchased of William H. Gorseline.

The many friends of Miss Mary Terwilliger are glad to hear that she is on the road to recovery, after being seriously ill for the past month.

Mrs. Asa Wynkoop and son, Kennet, and daughter, Esther, called on her cousin, Mrs. C. J. Terwilliger, at Mombaccus on Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Terwilliger had a stroke of paralysis, but is some better.

Russell Gray is ill with the German measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wynkoop of Krumville spent Wednesday at Asa Wynkoop's and also attended the auction.

Mrs. Anna Berger has returned home from New York and Brooklyn, where she has been spending a few weeks with her children.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Little Miss Marjorie Jeannette Winchell celebrated her fourth birthday Thursday at her home on Salem street, Port Ewen, by entertaining twelve of her little friends. Dainty refreshments were served and all declared Miss Marjorie a royal entertainer. Those present were Grace Lynn, Edna Vincent, Mildred and Jeannette Decker, Elmina Hotaling, Unice Short, Bernice Craig, Rosamond Lapman, Katherine Kenny, Annette Munson and Grace Hotaling.

Saulpaugh-Hicks.

Miss Alice E. Hicks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Hicks of No. 128 O'Neil street, and Frank W. Saulpaugh of this city, were united in marriage at the parsonage of the Third M. E. Church in Troy Tuesday afternoon. They were attended by Miss Cora Hicks, a sister of the bride, and Curtis W. DuBois of Troy. After a honeymoon trip they will reside at No. 128 O'Neil street. They have the well wishes of a host of friends.

Eighteen Cases of Measles.

At the present time there are eighteen cases of measles, a dozen cases of mumps and five whooping cough cases in Kingston, according to the records of the board of health. Quarantine precautions are being taken to prevent a spread of the measles, and other cases.

Guard for Finger Ring.

An ingenious new guard for finger rings is worn inside a ring and presses against the finger to prevent it turning, at the same time being almost invisible.

DIED.

DOUGHERTY—In this city, Wednesday, March 20, 1918, Lillian E. Dunn, wife of William O. Dougherty, Jr., in her 23rd year.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 22.—There was a steady tone to the stock market at the beginning today with prices showing fractional losses. Steel Common dropped ⅝ to 91¼, and Bethlehem fell ½ to 79⅝. Crucible, after selling up to 65, reacted to 64½, and Baldwin was off ½ to 77. Marine Preferred declined ⅝ to 96, and Mexican Petroleum fell 1 point to 94⅛. Distillers yielded ⅝ to 40⅞, and losses of ½ were sustained in Industrial Alcohol, American Can, American Telephone and Corn Products. Reading was off ⅞ to 82⅜, and Union Pacific to 120⅞. The copper stocks showed fractional losses. After the early declines a strong tone developed with many issues making substantial gains. Corn Products, which yielded ½ at the start, moved up to a new high of 38. Crucible, after declining to 64½, advanced to 65⅝. Industrial Alcohol from its low price of 124 rose to 125.

After the show of strength following the initial declines, the market again became firm. Steel Common ranged within 91¼ and 91⅝ during the best part of the forenoon, from which it reacted to 91. Mexican Petroleum declined to 94⅛, and Central Leather yielded 1⅛ to 66⅛. Reading dropped over one point to 82½, and Industrial Alcohol, after advancing to above 125, fell to 123⅞.

There was a dragging tendency to the market in the late afternoon, with prices generally reflecting pressure. There was some liquidation in the standard issues. Sinclair Oil dropped to 29⅞, a loss of 2 points, and Texas Company fell 4 points to 145½. Industrial Alcohol declined to 122¾, against an earlier high of 125 while Steel Common on small dealings dropped to 90⅝.

A heavy selling movement during the late afternoon caused losses of about a point to leading issues. Reading dropped 81⅜. Steel Common fell to 90⅝, and Marine Preferred to 94⅞. Central Leather dropped to 64⅝. Oil shares were weak.

SLEPT WHILE GUNS ROARED

Charles Francis Adams Told of Taking a Nap on a Hillside During Pickett's Charge.

In the campaigns of both Antietam and Gettysburg I was an officer in a regiment of cavalry, a mere subordinate, responsible only for obedience to orders.

At Gettysburg July 3 the division to which we belonged occupied the high, partly wooded ground on the right of the line, covering the enemy's flank and rear. It was a bright July day, hot, and with white clouds slowly rolling across the sky. Neither our lines nor those of the enemy were visible to us; and the sounds of battle were hushed. Waiting for orders and for action, we dismounted, out of regard for our horses as well as for ourselves, and sat or lay on the turf.

Inured to danger by contact long and close and thoroughly tired in body and overwrought in mind we listened for the battle to begin; and shortly after noon the artillery opened. We did not know it, for we could see nothing in that direction, but it covered the famous advance of Pickett's Virginia division upon Meade's center—that wonderful feat of arms—and just then, lulled by the incessant roar of the cannon, while the fate of the army and the nation trembled in the balance, at the very crisis of the great conflict, I dropped quietly asleep. It was not heroic, but it was essentially war.—From the Autobiography of Charles Francis Adams.

HAD THOUGHT FOR OTHERS

At the information booth in a large railroad terminal a traveler asked for a time-table, which he looked through until he came to the particular table he wanted. This table he cut out with his pocketknife, and then he put the booklet with this table now gone out of it back on the counter.

It seemed a thoughtless thing to do because, lying there as it did with its outer cover smooth, somebody might have picked it up and carried it off thinking, naturally enough, that it was complete, to discover its real condition only when it was too late.

But this misfortune really befell no one, for a moment later another traveler standing near, who had seen all this done and who was perhaps more thoughtful than the first, picked up the torn time-table and carried it off to drop it in the nearest waste paper receptacle.

Siberia Has Vast Resources.

The common notion of Siberia is based on latitude and climate. Because part of it is in the arctic circle the whole vast region has been assumed to be almost beyond the pale of civilized occupancy. Notwithstanding that much has been written describing Siberia as it is, the common notion is still that it is fit only for penal settlements and that the nihilists and other political exiles were sent to these settlements as a living death. This is not far from the truth. But the inhospitable regions in which the penal settlements were placed are far from being all Siberia, and even some of these districts are capable of sustaining the vigorous inhabitants of northern climates.

Siberia, in the economic sense, has all the resources which go to make a vast stretch of territory self-sustaining as an independent nation. It has forests, mines and great agricultural regions where every product of the temperate climate is capable of cultivation. The timber is in the north and west. The mines are in widely scattered districts.

Reflections.

His face would have stopped a clock. But how can one wonder at it when one learns that he was a wandering lecturer? Anyway, no one had even seen anything approaching the face that he hauled into Puddle-in-the-Clay one wet and muddy November night and set up in the town hall, allowing words—calculated to make every drinker of anything stronger than barley-water at once reform and spend the rest of his existence in sackcloth and ashes—slide out of the hole in the middle of it.

"Yes, my dear brothers," said the weird looking person, "for more than forty years I have shunned the glass."

"And I bloomin' well believe yer, guv'nor," said a loud and hearty voice from the middle of the audience. "If I'd a face like yours I wouldn't never look in a pail of water even."—London Ideas.

The Magnetic Compass.

Experiments with magnets known to the scientists 2,500 years ago, which, developed by Doctor Gilbert and Peter Perigrinus, led up to the present-day admiralty compass of Kelvin, were shown recently by Prof. J. A. Fleming, professor of electrical engineering, University of London, at the Royal institute.

"The earth is a magnet," said the professor, "and every piece of iron that has stood in a vertical position for any length of time is magnetized by the earth. You can try it on your garden railings."

The hostelry sign, "The Goat and Compass," he said, "does not refer to the mariner's friend, but is a contraction of the saying, 'God encompasses us,' and the compass takes its name, not from the magnetism which governs its working, but from the circular card which encompasses the needle."

Fascination of the Sea.

To those who live on the coast or near enough to visit it frequently, no words need be said in praise of the mighty ocean. Unlike the mountains, the prairie and the forest, the sea never grows monotonous. It is "a mere expanse of water," if you will, but it is such a varied expanse that one never grows weary of looking at it. It is this fascination that binds a sailor to his profession. His work is hard, the perils are many, and the pay and food are alike poor, but once a sailor he can never willingly drudge on land again. Even in his old age and crippled, he loves to haunt the seashore and gaze on the element he once lived upon.

A Youthful Violinist.

Willard Sahloff, the ten year old son of Secretary Fred Sahloff of the board of health, gave a very pleasing violin solo Wednesday evening at the entertainment in Masonic Hall under the auspices of the Order of Amaranth. He was accompanied on the piano by his aunt, Miss Amanda Leudtke.

No. 3 of a Series of

There's No Desk Room for Waste in Business Today

WE ARE CONVINCED that when we eliminate waste in our business, whether it be in time or labor or both, there is a reciprocal adjustment of the scales in favor of telephone service, the product which you buy and we sell.

IN OTHER WORDS, if we can do away with any waste time or labor that may be involved in furnishing telephone service, we can put an equal amount of time and labor into the service itself and to some extent add to the comfort, convenience, and efficiency that you derive from its use.

"SLOW" TELEPHONE ACCOUNTS, the accounts on which repeated efforts to collect must be made, result in a duplication of effort. Duplication means waste and in any war-time business organization that is keeping its eye on the military and commercial needs of the country, there is no room for waste.

TELEPHONE SUBSCRIBERS CAN ASSIST in the elimination of this waste by paying their bills within the reasonable specified time.

KEPT THEM MOVING

English Major Has Machine Gun Crew on the Jump.

About as Little Uncertainty in His Orders as There Are Polite Phrases in the Language He Employed in Issuing Them.

I make my way through the thick brush at Camp Upton to a machine gun range, guided by the intermittent staccato chatter of a Colt and hoping that I'm not by any chance wandering on to the private reserve of any busy bullets, William Slavens McNutt writes in Collier's.

I come out of the woods on the rear of the gun position. Near a big campfire a dozen or more American officers are grouped around two machine guns listening to the instructions of an English major. The English officer is a short, spare, peppery veteran with a raspy voice that he can use for the same purpose that a mule skinner uses a blacksnake.

"Burr-wuff!" he shouts. That's as near as I can get to it phonetically. Two captains leap to their places by the machine gun. The one who sights and operates the piece throws himself flat on his back with head cradled on the knees of the man feeding. There is some slight delay and the English major breaks into song.

"Come, come! Carry on! What are we waiting for? You should have killed a hundred by now. What is it? What is it? My word! Not so slow. We're not having dinner, you know; we're killing Boches. What the blinkety-blank's wrong now? Come, come! Carry on! Carry on!"

The gun speaks jarringly. One side of the barrel spits a stream of yellow [illegible] over the breast of the operator holding the trigger. Three feet [illegible] yards distant the blade of bullets [illegible] ground before the [illegible] up a little line of dust.

[illegible] outdoes a fifty yard advance [illegible] Scottish officers dispute [illegible] go forward at the [illegible] and set it up once more. [illegible] pull the trigger. Noon-[illegible] [illegible] and lugs, [illegible] English major enters [illegible] drop sigh. He [illegible] like a man with [illegible] a total loss. "Oh, my [illegible]" he moans softly. "How dead you've been by now! All right, leave off, leave off! Never mind."

He points to the man who carried the ammunition and who is standing behind the gun curiously watching the efforts of the crew to make it shoot.

"Next time don't stand up behind the gun. You stick up there like a dummy in a shop window. A body would think you were an advertisement for something. You're not trying to sell the gun to the Boches, you know. Standing there giving away the gun position! Next time find cover twenty paces to the right or left and try to act like a bit of mud. Yes!"

Had Been Through Hell.

Louis Raemaekers, the famous Dutch cartoonist, who in this country, whom the London Times has called "the only great genius brought out by the war," was unheard of before the war began. On August 1, 1914, he was living quietly with his family, contentedly painting the tulip fields, waterways, cattle and windmills of his native Holland. Four days later he drew the first cartoon, "Christendom After Twenty Centuries," of a series that was to reveal him as a champion of civilization and make his name a household word in every country. Raemaekers personally investigated the Belgian horror, and though a hundred of his early cartoons bear witness to the burning impression made upon his mind, he has only once brought himself to speak publicly of this experience. It was at a dinner given the artist at the Savage club, London, and, pointing to the portraits of Peary, Shott, Nansen and Shackleton, Raemaekers said: "I, too, have been an explorer, gentlemen. I have explored a hell, and it was terror unspeakable." Raemaekers is in his forty-eighth year.

Weekly War Story.

The company cook went to the commanding officer and respectfully asked when the soldiers were to be supplied with gas masks. The officer answered that he did not know. A week later, the cook again expressed his desire for a gas mask. This time, the officer happened to have a sample of the latest contrivance of this nature, which will probably be used by our soldiers in the trenches. He showed it to the cook, who immediately asked to borrow it. Inquiry revealed that the cook's idea was to put the mask on before he tackled a big job of peeling onions.

Will Soon Have Sea Mastery.

E. G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, told the 350 guests of the Allentown (Pa.) chamber of commerce at its banquet recently that the submarine destroyers which the Bethlehem corporation will build for the government are more than all of the destroyers now in the world. Mr. Grace said he regarded the rapid construction of destroyers as the solution of the submarine menace. Bethlehem plants now employ 30,000 men as compared with 9,000 five years ago. Charles M. Schwab, who also spoke, said that the pay roll of the Bethlehem plants is now $100,000,000 a year.—Iron Age.

Mothers Here Interested in New Treatment

NOTHING TO SWALLOW, YOU JUST RUB IT ON.

Local Druggists Have Arranged to Sell 25c, 50c, or $1.00 Package on 30 Days' Trial.

Local druggists report a great deal of interest, especially among mothers with small children, in the remarkable external "vapor" treatment, known as Vick's VapoRub, recently introduced here from the South.

This treatment makes unnecessary "dosing" with injurious medicines, wears flannel jackets and chest protectors, or keeping the children shut up indoors. You can let the little chaps run outdoors and get their needed fresh air and exercise. If colds do start, "nip them in the bud" by using VapoRub—it is externally applied and can therefore be used freely and often, with perfect safety, on the smallest member of the family.

VapoRub comes in salve form and is applied over the throat and chest, covering with a warm flannel cloth. The body heat releases medicated vapors that are inhaled with every breath, all night long, through the air passages to the lungs. These vapors loosen the phlegm and clear the air passages.

In cases of very severe chest colds or incipient pneumonia, first apply hot, wet towels over the throat and chest to open the pores. VapoRub is then absorbed through and stimulates the skin, taking out that tightness and soreness in the chest.

Ask your druggist about the 30 days' trial offer. —Advertisement.

Frank Markle has been very successful selling a large number of Easter post cards.

Those who were guests and callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Brown on Sunday were Miss Daisy Churchill, Miss Pansie Churchill, Mrs. L. E. Lawrence, Will Markle, Henry S. DeWitt, Edwin DeWitt, Ralph Hornbeck, Otto Alexander. An enjoyable day was spent with piano music and singing.

Ephraim Krom spent Monday out of town looking for a tenement house as he expects to move very soon.

DO YOU KNOW—

That new hosiery is made in "rights" and "lefts", to fit more snugly?

That motorcycles that weigh less than 100 pounds have been invented in England for women?

That a few slices of onion left in a pail of water for a few hours will absorb or counteract the smell of fresh paint?

Miss Freer to Sing at No. 6.

At the entertainment to be given by the Parent-Teachers' Association at School No. 6 this evening, for the benefit of the Red Cross Junior Auxiliary working fund, Miss Helen Freer, soprano soloist at the St. James M. E. church will sing. She will be accompanied by Miss Helen Rose. After the entertainment there will be dancing and refreshments for sale.

The First Hurdy Gurdy.

A hurdy gurdy, commonly known as a street piano, was heard uptown Thursday afternoon. Some modern tunes, and others very ancient were rendered in characteristic hurdy gurdy style. A man played the instrument while a woman gathered up the stray coins from the hearers.

Wreck on Central New England.

Traffic on the Central New England Railroad was blocked for several hours Tuesday night by the wreck of a freight train at Towners, Putnam county. Several coal cars jumped the track and went down a steep bank.

INTERESTING ITEMS ABOUT THE SCOUTS

Through the kindness of Senator Walton the scouts now have at their disposal a large supply of state publications. Among these are pamphlets on fish and game laws, white pine blister rust, increasing fish production, woodlot forestry, shade trees, forest taxation, the basket willow, reforesting, Arbor Day planting, resources of the forest preserve, etc.

Wood Collection.

A collection of some fifty pieces of wood representing the common woods of New York has been received from the State College of Forestry. Each piece is labeled with its common name and its scientific name, the location in which it grows, its weight per cubic foot dry, and the purposes for which the wood is used. This set will prove very helpful to scouts in recognizing different kinds of wood.

Fire Without Matches.

Several scouts have had success in getting a fire with new firemaking set at headquarters. It is a very easy matter for two scouts working together to get fire but the record of getting a fire alone is still open.

Sir Baden Powell.

Books For The Soldiers.

With the exception of about 15 books from troop No. 6 all of the 150 books on exhibition in the window at headquarters were contributed by about 6 scouts from troop No. 5. Why give all the honors to a few scouts when every scout has a chance to give a soldier at least one good book to read. One scout got over 300 merit points for the books brought in. There are 5 merit points given for each book. We must get our share of this work done this week as there are other jobs coming. Help tie the home-fire to the camp-fire with a book. Come and see the window display and all the books that were brought in by a few scouts.

Liberty Loan Meeting.

Plans are now being made for a big meeting to be held at the opening of the Third Liberty Loan. The 3b War Service emblems are here and will be presented at the meeting. A special program will be arranged and the public invited to see the stunts that scouts do. Each troop is asked to prepare a special stunt. Have you bought a guard rope? Have you ordered a scout staff?

Scout Supplies.

A new stock of scout supplies have arrived and will be sold to registered scouts. They include writing paper, watch fobs, drinking cups, axes, knives, lanyards, guard ropes, post cards, and uniforms. Get your camp equipment early and avoid the rush.

Troop Items—Troop No. 5.

At the meeting of the troop held at the troop headquarters on Tuesday, the Red Trailer Patrol was the highest standing patrol with over 700 points. Jack DeWitt was the honor scout. The next meeting will be held Tuesday, March 26. All scouts are requested to attend as plans for the third Liberty Loan will be made. All registration fees should be in by the next meeting in order that every scout may be registered before the start of the Liberty Loan.

Troop No. 6.

There will be no regular meeting of the troop this week, owing to the absence of the scoutmaster. Each patrol is expected to meet and make plans. As yet only a dozen books have been turned in for the soldiers and sailors.

Note—No report has been received from Troops No. 1 and No. 4. The Troop Scribes must be asleep or dead.

Armory Drill.

At the drill yesterday Sergeant Whittaker gave different scouts charge of the company and each one drilled the entire body for a few minutes. No definite appointments were made but next week patrol leaders will be appointed to drill a squad of scouts. All scouts should turn out and get into the competition for officers.

Hike Saturday.

All scouts who want to take out door tests should meet at the Burgevin building on Fair street at 1 tomorrow. The Scout Executive will take the scouts on a hike if the weather is fair and tests will be given.

Red Cross at School 7.

This evening School No. 7 will hold its entertainment, followed by dancing at the school, for the benefit of the Red Cross Junior Auxiliary fund. While all of the program is exceptionally good, the part to be taken by the school children themselves will prove of special interest. A big crowd is expected. The program will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

TWO OF KINGSTON'S COLORED SOLDIERS

PRIVATE WILLIAM JACKSON.

Battery D, 349th Field Artillery, Camp Dix, N. J. Private Jackson has been confined to the base hospital in camp and had a very serious operation performed on him and is now convalescing.

PRIVATE JOHN DU BOIS.

WATER PRESSURE BECOMING NORMAL

Water pressure is rapidly becoming normal throughout the city it was stated today at the water board office in the city hall. This winter has been exceptionally hard on the residents of the city, especially those residing on the high points who have been without water for a great part of the time. This was due to no fault of the water depatment but to the fact that a break in the low pressure main made it necessary to supply the city with water from the high pressure main only. It was also due to the fact that all over the city householders found it necessary to allow the water to run full force from the faucets to prevent water pipes from freezing. Even then the water pipes froze, and today there are still some service pipes that remain frozen.

Women Voters to Meet.

This evening the women of Kingston, who are over the age of 21 years, are one and all, invited to attend the meeting at the Rondout Presbyterian church this evening, to learn more of their duties as citizens having the responsibility of the ballot now in their hands. It is expected that the entire body of Kingston women will be formed into an effective organization at this evening's meeting, which is called for 7:30 o'clock.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

There is a difference between efficiency and effectiveness. Efficiency is doing in the best way something that makes oneself better off; effectiveness is doing in the best way something that makes other people better off.

GOOD EATING.

From stale bread cut six slices, remove the crusts and butter the bread.

Put through a food chopper sufficient fresh coconut from which the brown skin has been pared to make a cupful and a half. Separate the whites and yolks of three eggs, beat the yolks with half a cupful of sugar, a half teaspoonful of vanilla and one pint of milk. Cut the bread in half-inch dice. Arrange half of it in a baking dish, sprinkling one quarter of the coconut through it. Pour over it half of the raw custard, add the remainder of the bread, another quarter of the coconut and the rest of the custard. Bake in a moderate oven until set in the center. Spread the top with a layer of quince jelly, cover with the remainder of the coconut and over all heap the whites beaten to a stiff froth and sweetened with three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Sift sugar thickly over the top and brown in the oven.

Pittsburgh Potatoes.—Wash and pare potatoes and cut in half-inch cubes. There should be one quart. Put in a stewpan with one small onion chopped fine, and cover with boiling salted water, cook five minutes, add three canned pimentoes drained and cut in strips, and cook five minutes; drain and put into a buttered baking dish. Melt four tablespoonfuls of drippings, add the same amount of flour, cook until well blended; then add two cupfuls of milk gradually, stirring constantly. Bring to the boiling point and add a half pound of good cheese, grated, with three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt and an eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Pour this sauce over the potatoes and bake in the oven until Brown.

Puree of Pea-Pods.—Chop the pods from two quarts of fresh peas, add five cupfuls of cold water and put on to cook for an hour and a half, then rub through a coarse sieve. There should be three cupfuls of the puree. Add three cupfuls of milk, a tablespoonful of sugar and salt and pepper to taste. Thicken with two tablespoonfuls each of fat and flour. Let boil up and serve piping hot.

SAVE THE MONEY THAT GROWS IN YOUR POCKET

By EUGENE P. LYLE, JR.

Suppose in passing a post office, bank, or drug store, you saw a window display of five-dollar bills marked down to $4.14.

Well, that is what you will see, now shortly, in actual fact and to every practical intent. The Sale is to be on from December 1 next until January 1—a month of Unprecedented Bargains in Five Dollar Bills, slashed to the remarkable figure of $4.14 during this month only!

There is no nigger in this woodpile. They are good bills—in fact, a brand new issue, not even shopworn. In cut and pattern they are a radical departure—a totally new and attractive creation—something "different" for buyers of discernment. But you will have to see them to know and appreciate. They may look more like stamps than bills, but they're money just the same. And any time you don't like them, you can change them back into the old-style money that you are accustomed to.

They will be worth keeping, though. You buy them at the knock-down price of $4.14, and if you keep them five years you get $5.00 apiece for them. But even if you don't, you can't lose. No, you win. At last here is a proposition where you can't do anything but win. The day you buy one of those bargains, you can get back what you paid for it. But if you keep it for one month after the Sale closes, you can get one cent more than you paid for it. And so on, every month means another cent, until finally on January 1, 1923, you get $5.00 for it, or 87 cents more than you paid for it.

You have had money that burns in your pocket, and after it had burned its way out, you doubtless thought it very unsatisfactory money. But did you ever have money that grew in your pocket? Well, fill your pockets with the new kind, and Feel It Grow!

Assuredly this new-style money is going to be the rage. In these United States it will be something abso-lute-ly new. And there's going to be a rush to the bargain counter. Human nature is that way, for everybody will want to convert his money that doesn't grow into the new money that does grow. So begin saving now, and be ready for the rush. However, don't bother to save more than a thousand dollars—at least, not for yourself—because there's a limit to this good thing. That is, not more than a thousand dollars' worth of these new goods will be sold to any one customer.

Nothing more now, but details of the Gigantic Sacrificial Sale will appear later—Watch for them! Watch sharp! It will be for one month only—December 1 to January 1, remember! That's the month. Get ready, brother—get ready! Buy the Money that Grows, and Feel It Grow!

The Ex-Czarina.

I rub my eyes when I read that the czarina is a deeply scheming, intriguante who had ambiguous relations with Rasputin and aimed at the success of Germany over the country she had adopted by marriage as her own. It is only necessary to cast my memory back to the time when I was just entering womanhood and Princess Alexandra Alix was a girl some ten years my junior. Certainly I knew the shy, reserved simple child well enough to realize that she had not the mental development for any form of intrigue. Residence at Buckingham palace under the keen critical eye of an august grandmother, an eye that nothing could possibly escape, did not make for striking individuality, nor did the quiet simplicity of the German home, and the princess grew up beneath the double burden of surveillance and etiquette sharing the quiet intellectual life of an adored mother. Yet she had a certain measure of high spirits, loved tennis and dancing, and having tuned her life to play its small part in the great household orchestra, seemed happy enough.—The Bookman.

Treatment for Ferns.

Spray the fern once a week with a solution of tobacco extract, using one of the commercial extracts, one fluid ounce to a gallon of water. If the plant is badly infected, cut off the fronds and burn them.

KINGSTON, N. Y.

MEETING HELD BY TUBERCULOSIS COM.

At a special meeting of the executive council of the Ulster County Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis, held at the office of the chairman, the Hon. Joseph M. Fowler, this week, action was taken regarding the application of Miss O'Shea for an indefinite leave of absence, on account of ill health, and other matters of import regarding tuberculosis work in the city and county were considered.

The committee granted Miss O'Shea's request, expressing its sincere sympathy in the cause of her request, and the leave of absence was granted, to take effect April 15th. Miss O'Shea was also very highly complimented upon her loyal and efficient service as special Tuberculosis Visiting Nurse for the Committee especial appreciative mention being made of her work in connection with the recent Red Cross Christmas seal sale. A committee, consisting of the president, Dr. Gates and the Rev. John J. Hickey, was appointed with power, to secure a successor to Miss O'Shea to take up her duties during her enforced absence. That committee has secured the services of Miss Brown assistant nurse at the Tuberculosis Hospital, whose four years' experience at the hospital, and general training make her especially competent to take up the work and carry it forward until Miss O'Shea's return.

The question of a City Tuberculosis Dispensary was also brought up and carefully investigated. While it was most favorably considered by the council, it was decided to hold the matter open until an adjourned meeting to be held near Wednesday afternoon at Mr. Fowler's office at four o'clock, when Dr. Prest of the State Charities Aid Association, especially conversant with such problems will be present. At that meeting other matters of importance relative to tuberculosis work in the city and county will be considered.

FROST KEEPS GAS MEN VERY BUSY

They Have Spent a Week Hunting For a Leak in the Main Downtown —It Took Eight Weeks to Locate a Break in Ponckhockie.

For a week past workmen in the employ of the Kingston Gas & Electric Company have been hunting for a leak in the gas main downtown, but up to noon today they had not located it. The method of locating the leak is by punching a hole in the brick pavement on lower Broadway and the Strand. These holes are punched about fifteen or more feet apart. If no smell of gas is emitted the men know they have not located the leak.

The record hunt this past winter was for a leak in the gas main in Ponckhockie and after eight weeks spent in a search for it it was finally located on Catherine street. When the earth was excavated and the pipe uncovered it was found that the frost had broken the main squarely in two.

Another bad break that was found after considerable trouble was that on Broadway in front of the Orpheum Theater. In order to make repairs it was necessary to excavate considerable pavement and earth and dig under the trolley tracks. Here it was also found that the frost had broken the pipe in two.

Indoor Baseball Tonight.

The big sporting event of the season is scheduled for this evening at 8 o'clock in the state armory, when Mayor Canfield will toss the first ball across the plate in the indoor baseball game between a picked team from Company M and a selected team from the police department. Physical Director Godfrey, of the Y. M. C. A. is expected to be called upon to umpire. It is said that several insurance agents dogged Mr. Godfrey's steps today when they learned he was to officiate to have him take out an accident policy. The cops are wise up on signals, having had considerable practice with the signal box system and expect to overcome their opponents by some classy inside stuff. The soldiers say leave it to them. The city ambulance and a crew of Red Cross nurses will be on duty at the armory. The proceeds are for the benefit of the Red Cross. The armory should be jammed this evening.

Tommies Surprise Italy.

Whole battalions of Thomas Atkinses, now that the long-expected snowfall has buried the Austro-Germans in deep Alpine drifts, have been paying visits to the Milan opera house and receiving immense ovations. By way of acknowledgment Tommy gave the laurel-crowned "Tipperary," and created a sensation, as well he might, in that sacred mecca of Italian opera. Flowers were showered upon him in most embarrassing fashion. The reason of this delicate attention may be the kilts, at which the people gaze in undisguised amazement. One veteran peasant exclaimed: "Fancy, women as well as men go to war in that country, and yet they look as though they would make mincemeat of the Germans." Little wonder that some of these kilted "ladies" received not only flowers, but equally embarrassing kisses.—Christian Science Monitor.

BAN IS OPTIMISTIC,

American League President Believes Season Will Be Good.

President Ban Johnson of the American league, who was not inclined to be optimistic over the baseball outlook at the close of the 1917 season, has been encouraged to take a more rosy view as the result of the winter's developments.

"Interest has been maintained all winter by the numerous exchanges of players in both leagues and I begin to feel optimistic as to the future," said Mr. Johnson. "There will be an abundance of playing talent and in spite of the army draft and navy enlistments, which have deprived the leagues of some splendid ball players, there will be others to fill their places.

"Colonel Ruppert made an excellent move when he engaged Miller Huggins to manage the Yankees. Huggins is a smart baseball man and in due time I feel confident he will obtain successful results. Of course, he must have time to size up the players who will report to him. You must remember that he is entirely new in the American league and has many things to learn. But you can't take away from him his complete knowledge of the inside workings of baseball.

"Ed Barrow, I am sure, will prove just the sort of man the Red Sox need to get the results of which that great team of players Frazee has gathered is capable and right here I want to say that after talking with Connie Mack I am inclined to believe the Athletics are not so badly off as some of their critics have made it appear.

"Fielder Jones, with the changes made in his Browns, and with a little more luck, should prove what we all believe him to have, the talents of a successful leader. Cleveland has been hard hit, but Jim Dunn is gamely rebuilding.

"Altogether our league seems in good shape, and as I say, I am much more cheerful about the outlook for a good season now than I was two months ago. It did really look bad to me then."

SWIMMER OFFERS TO TEACH

Bud Goodwin, American swimming champion for 17 years, has offered to serve as a swimming instructor wherever Uncle Sam can use him. He will probably be assigned to a naval training station. Goodwin is beyond military age. He has represented the New York Athletic club during his period as champion.

FIVE OF OHIO STATE CAPTAINS IN SERVICE

When Hap Courtney, captain of the Western conference, enlisted in the ensign school for the navy at Chicago, he was the fifth captain of Ohio State to enter the service. Bolen, basketball; Steinhilber, cross-country; Harley, football captain-elect, and Todd, track leader, are the other four. Captains of tennis and baseball teams were turned down on account of physical defects or they would be gone, too.

SCHMIDT, WHO RETIRED, MAY RETURN TO GAME

Charles Schmidt, who, as first baseman for the world's champion Boston Braves of 1915, was one of the few big league baseball players to actually enter retirement in the height of their prime, may come back.

But, should the players who rose from the Baltimore sand lots to a regular position with the team that won baseball's premier honors after one of the greatest spurts in the game's history, really decide to again don a uniform, it will be merely through an act of patriotism.

His business is thriving and baseball could never call him back unless he thought he were needed to help fill the ranks of those who may be called off to war.

COUNTY COURT NOTICE.

The People of the State of New York, to the Sheriff of the County of Ulster, Greeting:—You are hereby commanded to summon the several persons who shall have been drawn in your county, to serve as jurors, at a County Court, to be held in and for your county, at the Court House, in the City of Kingston, in said county, on Monday, the 1st day of April, 1918, to appear thereat, to bring before the said court all prisoners then being in the jail of your county, together with all processes and proceedings any way concerning them in your hands, and make proclamation in manner prescribed by law, notifying all persons bound to appear at the said court by recognizance or otherwise, to appear thereat, and requiring all Justices of the Peace, Coroners, and other officers who have taken recognizance for the appearance of any person at such court, or who have taken any inquisition, or the examination of any prisoner or witness, to return such recognizances, inquisitions and examinations to the court at the opening thereof on the first day of its sitting.

Witness, Hon. James Jenkins, Esquire, County Judge of Ulster County, at the Court House in Kingston, this 5th day of March, 1918.

F. G. TRAVER,
District Attorney.

PROCLAMATION.—State of New York, Ulster County, ss.: The undersigned, Sheriff of said County, in conformity to a precept in this behalf directed and delivered, by this his proclamation, requires all persons bound to appear at the County Court, to be held in and for the said County of Ulster, at Kingston, in said county, on Monday, the 1st day of April, 1918, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, by recognizance or otherwise, to appear thereat. And he requires all Justices of the Peace, Coroners and other officers, who have taken any recognizance for the appearance of any person at said court, or who have taken any inquisition, or the examination of any person or witness, to return such recognizances, inquisitions and examinations to the said court at the opening thereof on the first day of its sitting.—Signed at the sheriff's office in said county March 5th, 1918.

WRIGHT J. SMITH,
Sheriff of Ulster County.

That's the shape of the fire pot in Square Pot Boilers. This exclusive construction is a big step in advance of all other designs of boilers. Radiating surface is increased, heat is in direct and close contact with water-containing sections, and grate bars are all of same length. This allows quick clearance and prevents clogging. Square Pot Boilers steam quickly and require less attention than other kinds.

They are made of highest quality materials by expert workmen and designed on scientifically correct, practically proven heating principles. Consult your dealer or write direct to us. No matter what your requirements are, there's a Square Pot Boiler or Furnace to fill them.

HELPFUL LECTURE THURSDAY EVENING

Given by Mr. Farley at the Elks' Club—Kingston Merchants Are Told of Modern Methods of Buying and Selling and General Management of a Retail Business—Illustrated by a Three-Reel Picture.

"The Troubles of a Merchant and How to Stop Them" was the subject of an interesting and very instructive lecture given Thursday evening at the Elks' club house by William H. Farley, under the direction of the Retailers Group of Kingston Chamber of Commerce.

The pictures shown in connection with the lecture were clear and the films, a three-reel Essany feature, portraying the many problems presented to the merchant and how to solve them in a practical and result-getting manner, is one of the cleverest pictures ever produced covering retail merchandising.

Over three hundred persons attended the lecture. The house committee and the officers of the Elks received the guests with characteristic hospitality, and "open house" was the order of the evening.

The lecturer was introduced by E. M. Heermans, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Heermans also made a brief address in which he outlined the work that the chamber is doing and asked for the hearty co-operation of all the members of the chamber and the citizens.

Mr. Heermans said that Mr. Farley's service had been secured through the courtesy of the national Cash Register Company, but not as an advertisement for this company. Old fashioned store methods preventing a good display of goods in the store and store windows, poor system and old fashioned sales ideas were compared with modern methods.

The value of window displays as a selling asset was emphasized.

Retail failures and their causes, store organization, newspaper advertising; clerks, efficiency; credit business and delivery problems were also taken up in the lecture.

Mr. Farley has given this lecture in many large cities and it has secured much favorable publicity and commendation.

THE AUTOPED
FOR PLEASURE AND UTILITY

The Autoped is efficiently used going to and from the golf links and the country club, for the beach, and for any of the hundred and one little excursions where it is desirable to make the most of time without the expense attendant upon the big four wheeled motor veicles

OF UNLIMITED USEFULNESS

The Autoped is an ideal conveyance for business men to and from their places of business; for physicians to answer hurry calls; for commercial salesmen to call on the trade, for employes to ride to and from work, and for anybody else who wants to save money, time and energy in going about.

For the ladies shopping, calling or just going. Folds in small size. For every man, business and pleasure, the quickest transportation for salesmen, doctors solicitors, etc. So light you can cary with one hand. A land tender for autos.

JUST imagine owning the Magic Carpet of Bagdad!

Imagine possessing the power to step on a simple platform and almost at the expression of a wish to be able to GO!—anywhere, everywhere, quickly comfortably and at the least expense.

Imagine owning a means of transportation so light in weight that you can lift it with practically no effort—so simple that you can master it in a few short hours—so ingeniously constructed that it will travel at five to twenty-five miles an hour and keep going for nearly a hundred miles on a gallon of gasoline—and so well built that it will give you lasting service with a minimum upkeep cost.

Imagine all these things and then couple to them the greatest ratio of personal safety found in any mechanically operated vehicle and you will have a good mental picture of the latest thing in transportation—THE AUTOPED.

NO 'BRIGHT MONEY'

Mrs. Billtops Rises to Height of Self-Sacrifice.

She Had a "Good Thing" in Her Arrangement with the Partner of Her Joys and Sorrows, but Patriotism Came First.

"Something unexpected has happened," said Mr. Billtops. "Something quite unexpected.

"You know, for years I have been giving Mrs. Billtops all my bright money. Whenever I got a bright dime or quarter or half I simply turned it over to Mrs. Billtops.

"There might be weeks when I would not get a single bright coin; but there would be other weeks in which I would receive in change a considerable number. Altogether these bright coins provided for Mrs. B. a tidy bit of revenue, and I am sure it was as great a pleasure for me to turn them over to Mrs. Billtops as it was for her to receive them, though once this bright money proposition did give me a little scare.

"I dropped into a candy store one day to get some candy for Mrs. Billtops and there in change for a $5 bill I received two bright dimes and four absolutely spick and span bright new $1 bills!

"Well, now, there was something to make you stop and think. Under our understanding I was to give Mrs. Billtops all 'bright money.' It is true that by that I understood bright coins, and I had no doubt that Mrs. Billtops did, too, but the promise from me was of all 'bright money' and on a strict interpretation, which I did not desire to evade, there was nothing for me to do but to turn over with the two bright dimes those four bright dollars. Which I did.

"But Mrs. Billtops declined to receive them.

"'No, Ezra,' she said, 'no. We both understood bright money to mean bright coins, and we will go not by the letter of the contract but by the spirit. Ezra, you keep the $4.'

"Which I did, and I was always glad she settled it that way, for the opposite interpretation of my obligation might sometimes have subjected me to considerable inconvenience.

"Suppose I should some day have gone into a candy store and laid down not a $5 bill but a $1,000 bill and received in change $999.20 all in bright money, which by the contract I should have been required to turn over to Mrs. Billtops. Why, I have seen the time when handing over that amount of money in that way would have cramped me quite some.

"But never have I failed to hand over all bright coins, year after year continuously, until yesterday, when that something unexpected happened when Mrs. Billtops said to me:

"'Ezra, no more bright money. I have always been glad to get it for the sentiment of it and for the use I could make of it, but you need the money more now and from now on you keep it and use it as you would any other money and I will deny myself that luxury. No more bright money, Ezra, from now until the end of the war.'

"Unexpected it certainly was, but still it was only what you would have expected her to do, if you knew Mrs. Billtops."

AMUSING PIECE OF "NERVE"

In "Facing the Hindenburg Line," by Burris A. Jenkins, may be found a number of incidents in which naval men prove their coolness and heroism. Nobody knows all the stories of coolness and heroism among the naval men, says the author. We shall not learn them till the war is over, but here is one that perhaps the censors will allow to go by. It was told by a medical officer who was aboard the Franconia when she was sunk acting as a transport.

"We had five or six naval officers aboard. They were sitting in the smoking room—remember the smoking lounge in the old Franconia? It was very long, as long as this dining room and twice as broad. They had just ordered whisky sodas. Suddenly there was an explosion and the steel floor of the smoking room just buckled up and burst apart in the middle of the ship. One of those officers called the steward and said:

"'I ask you to witness, steward, that we have paid for these whisky sodas and have not had time to drink them.'

"Then the rascals went below, got on their lifebelts, came back again, asked the steward for a big sheet of foolscap, wrote out a long, 'we, the undersigned,' setting forth that they had ordered six whisky sodas, for which they had paid nine shillings, with a sixpence tip, and had not been allowed to drink them. Thereupon they entered a claim against the British government for the nine shillings and sixpence, with accrued interest from date. Then they walked in a body up to the bridge and handed it to the skipper. The old man told me afterward he never was so grateful to anybody as to these cool young devils for the steadying and bucking up influence of their impudence."

Japanese Tiger Hunters.

Tadasaburo Yamamoto, one of Japan's most wealthy men, who has immense shipping interests, returned recently from a tiger hunt in the Korean mountains. Mr. Yamamoto had with him 200 friends and professional sportsmen who are experts with the rifle. They left Tokyo on November 15 and established headquarters at Gensang, a small port on the northern coast of the Sea of Japan. The experienced sportsmen were distributed among the amateurs in the party, so that everybody was given an opportunity to bag what game was encountered.

Mr. Yamamoto and his party returned recently from the hunt after several successful weeks in the Korean mountains and has been feasting his friends on tiger steaks and other dishes from the game brought home.—New York Herald.

Easy Solution of Difficulty.

A pompous old gentleman upon reaching his home one evening found the street blockaded and a heap of earth piled against his doorstep. Observing a workman wielding his shovel in a nearby ditch, he accosted a passing policeman and complained that the laborer was trespassing upon private property.

"There's no other place t' throw it!" replied the workman indifferently.

"Well, thin, in that case, yez had better dig another hole an' throw it in there!"

Patch Skull With Patient's Own Ribs.

The replacing of destroyed portions of skull with layers of cartilage taken from the patient's own ribs is one of the latest methods of healing war injuries. H. Warren Woodroffe, surgeon of the Ulster Volunteer hospital in France, describes the method which has been successfully tried on a number of severely wounded men.

Cutting down to the ribs parallel to the breast bone, the surgeon slices off thin layers of the cartilage which attaches the bony ribs to the breast bone. These are held in the gap caused by the destruction of the skull after the scalp has been turned back. The scalp is then stitched back in place. Within a few weeks, instead of having no protection to the underlying brain, a hard layer of cartilage, firm though slightly elastic, is formed.

SUFFERED FOR HIS COUNTRY

Silas Deane, the first diplomatic agent of the United States, was born at Groton, Mass., close to 200 years ago. He became a merchant and was a delegate to the first Continental congress. In [illegible] of 1776 he was sent to Paris as a secret diplomatic agent. He posed as a merchant from Bermuda and upon his arrival in Paris sought an interview with Count de Vergennes, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who refused to receive him. Deane was reduced to the direst poverty and was ejected by his landlady.

Subsequent American ambassadors have complained of the lack of suitable embassies, but Deane was reduced to a point where he had to accept poor lodging [illegible] Beaumarchais [illegible] Deane was given an audience with Louis XVI and [illegible] the diplomatic privileges which [illegible] usually received in the second audience. In 1777 Deane was recalled.

In the bitter controversy which followed his recall Thomas Paine revealed the fact that supplies furnished the colonies had been furnished by the French government. This was considered a diplomatic indiscretion and it cost Paine his place as secretary of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Deane, driven into poverty and exile, died in England in 1789. Half a century later his claim for his services abroad was adjusted by congress and a large sum was paid his heirs.

ALL MADE EQUAL BY DEATH

No Democracy Ever Conceived Is at All Comparable to That of the Tomb.

In the democracy of the dead all men at last are equal. There is neither rank nor station nor prerogative in the republic of the grave. At this fatal threshold the philosopher ceases to be wise, and the song of the poet is silent. Dives relinquishes his millions and Lazarus his rags. The poor man is as rich as the richest, and the rich man is as poor as the pauper. The creditor loses his usury and the debtor is acquitted of his obligation. There the proud man surrenders his dignities, the politician his honors, the worldling his pleasures; the invalid needs no physician, and the laborer rests from unrequited toil.

Here, at last, is nature's final decree in equity. The wrongs of time are redressed. Injustice is expiated, the irony of fate is refuted; the unequal distribution of wealth, honor, capacity, pleasure and opportunity which makes life such a cruel and inexplicable tragedy, ceases in the realm of death. The strongest there has no supremacy, and the weakest needs no defense. The mightiest captain succumbs to that invincible adversary who disarms alike the victor and the vanquished.—John J. Ingalls.

Sprouts After 1,000 Years.

At the Zensui Temple, Iwane village, Koga-gun, Shiga Prefecture, a very ancient wooden idol of Vaisravana was opened four years ago and some rice that had reposed therein fully ten centuries was removed and planted. The seeds germinated and the rice grown therefrom appears to be similar in all respects to that of the present day. The yield was large and the crop for next year from this seed is expected to be excellent.

Vaisravana is the God of Treasure. When the statue was repaired a bag of coarse flaxen textile was exhumed containing rice seeds, with a piece of paper bearing the following inscription, in Chinese: "This image has been engraved for the peace of the world. If any one of later generations opens it, he should put in new seeds." The Tokyo Academy of Fine Art pronounces the image and its contents of great antiquity—at least 1,000 years old.

STATE ORGANIZED FOR BOND SALES

LOCALIZED RESPONSIBILITY BASIS OF THE CAMPAIGN

Arrangements Perfected for Individual Canvass Both in the Rural and Industrial Sections of Reserve District.

Preparations for the Third Liberty Loan campaign throughout the Second Federal Reserve District have been advanced with such rapidity that the working organization will be ready to take up the work as soon as the great drive opens.

In one particular the campaign outside of New York city will differ materially from the work done in the previous loan campaigns, the basic principle, as explained by the campaign chiefs, being "localized responsibility." The purpose will be to reach every possible purchaser of the bonds and to spare no effort in doing so.

Many complexities in the organization have been adjusted to meet this demand for localized responsibility. They can be understood best by a summary of the work to be done in the rural districts. Each county has been divided into sections under the supervision of individual chairmen. These in turn have provided for canvassing each locality on a house-to-house basis, the canvassing to be done not by outsiders, but by men living in the particular districts, men who are known and who are in many cases intimate with the people to whom the appeal will be made. It is believed this specific appeal will be much more effective in selling bonds than any attempt on the part of outsiders to convince residents of these sections of the necessity and the advantage of taking liberal amounts of the securities.

In the industrial sections of New York and New Jersey an equally detailed canvassing scheme will be carried out. Steps have been taken in every important industrial organization to have the Liberty Bond campaign brought forcibly to the notice of the workers. The work in this field will be both educational and of a patriotic nature.

Despite the extraordinary efforts to handle the campaign on an individual basis, the opinion has been expressed by many of the Liberty Loan workers that conditions for the sale of the Third Liberty Loan are much more propitious in the rural districts than in the previous loans. News coming from the American front in France has served not only as an inspiration to patriotic citizens, but has emphasized among all of them the vastness of the struggle and the great sacrifices that are necessary both in a material and a moral sense.

On the opening day of the loan the great machine will be set in motion and will be constantly in motion until the work is done. The preliminary work has been so thorough that it is expected very large sales will be made in many centers and that many towns will win the Liberty Loan Honor Flag.

"Farmers' Fighting Spirit!"

John Morgan Wing, life member of the New York State Agricultural Society, in a statement made to the Liberty Loan Committee on the "Farmer's Fighting Spirit" says:

"America as a nation has 'arrived,' and, though modesty may not allow us to state baldly our position in the line of great nations, let every one of us honestly ask ourselves the question, 'What is our position?' The answer will be big—perhaps could not be bigger.

"We started our journey in a small way with Liberty as our emblem, our farmers firing the guns, for it seems that Liberty must ever be inaugurated with gunfire.

"The wonders that have been wrought in the past by our farmers we know will again be wrought.

"The Liberty standard is once more lifted aloft, for there are those abroad who would rob us of the fruits of the early sacrifices; and our farmers are going to win the fight for us, yes, and most of their fighting will be right down on the farm! The produce of the earth, which are the sinews of war, will be supplied; their men, when needed, will be supplied to the extent that they can be spared, and, lastly, their money will be invested in Liberty Bonds."

Would Have Only Pleasant Memory.

"I never," a wife told me, Margaret E. Sangster writes in the Christian Herald, "say an unpleasant thing to my husband when he is leaving for work in the morning. If he's done something inconsiderate that has annoyed me I forget it. If there is any little worry to confide in him, I keep it for another time. Life, it seems to me, is very involved in the city, very uncertain. There are so many trucks and cars on the street, so many accidents every day that I would hate to think that my husband, in the midst of all his hurry and worry, carried an unpleasant picture of me—a picture that I had created! I would hate to think, if anything did happen, that my face, when he saw it for the last time, had a frown on it. That's why I smile at him always when I say good-by in the morning and let nothing but love shine out of my eyes!"

Uses Chinese Wood Oil.

Tung-yu, or wood oil, is widely used throughout China as a paint oil for outside purposes. As a drying oil it excels even linseed oil. One of its greatest local markets is found among the boatmen, who never paint their boats, but coat them with the cruder grades of wood oil, which not only gives the woodwork a bright, lustrous finish, but also acts as an excellent preservative. When certain mineral substances known as t'uzu and t'o-shen are added to the wood oil and the resulting mass is heated for about two hours, kwang-yu, or wood oil varnish, is produced. This wood oil varnish is used as a waterproofing substance for silks, pongees, etc., and also as an ornamental varnish when coloring materials are added.

Be Careful With Electricity.

Some safety hints for the wise, which are intended to guard against serious accidents and a possible loss of life, are being sent out broadcast by the electric light companies. From them may be selected the following: Do not cover an electric globe with paper or cloth. It may start a fire. Do not hang an ordinary lamp cord over a nail or metal work. Do not leave a cord connected when you are through with it. Do not touch any wire that is down on the ground, whether it is an electric, telephone or guy wire. In an emergency, remove a wire with an instrument equipped with a wooden handle, keeping the full length of the handle between yourself and the wire.—Popular Science Monthly.

Bicycle Remains Unsung.

Coaching has its Nimrod, the turf its Druid, the locomotive, nay, the upstart motor car, has its heroics written in the whirlwind vein of "Tamburlaine the Great," with due accompaniment of gong and cymbals. But the bicycle, in the many years of its popular existence, has found not a single literary champion. It has passed into a busy world unsung. The word "cycle," it has been decided by one school of thought, has proved a deterrent; the "bike" of hooking office parlance is more ignominious still. Had it been called a pair-wheel, or a foot-wheel, or, as Poet Barnes suggested, a "wheel saddle," there might have been some hope for it.

Man's Index Finger.

Man's hand is arranged as to finger lengths like the monkey's. The primitive plan was for the third finger to be the longest, the fourth the next in length, the second the next, the fifth or little finger the next, while the thumb is shortest of all. The editor of the Journal of American Heredity declares that it is very commonly discovered that the first or index finger is as long or longer than the fourth, and this is doubtless due to the functional importance of the index finger. "I am not sure," he says, "that it should not be considered as the typical human condition."

Origin of Blizzard.

Blizzard is undoubtedly a word of American origin, but it is much older than suggested. In Amersham (Eng.) churchyard today there is a tomb of the Blizard family and people of that name still reside in the village of Chalfont St. Giles. A man of this name accompanied William Penn to the new world. This Blizard, it is said, developed very unsociable habits and settled far away from his fellows in the remote Northwest. Now a northwestern snowstorm is the most disagreeable thing there is about the whole climate, and Mr. Blizard, being so unpleasant a person to his neighbors, his name was adopted to describe the objectionable type of weather which blew from his direction.

ROAD BUILDING

NATION-WIDE BOOST IS SEEN

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That the better roads movement is receiving a nation-wide boost is shown by the fact that all the states of the Union have availed themselves of the opportunity of participating in the benefits of the federal aid road act, which appropriated $75,000,000 for the construction of post roads and $10,000,000 for forest roads, according to the report of the director of the office of public roads and rural engineering, United States department of agriculture. That the passage of the act has stimulated road building is shown by the fact that in 1916, there were approximately $41,000,000 of state funds expended for all highway purposes, and it is estimated that in the calendar year, 1917, the aggregate expenditures of state funds for this purpose will be at least $60,000,000. A number of the states have made specific appropriations to meet federal aid dollar for dollar. Among these are New York, Illinois, Michigan, Rhode Island, Nevada, Iowa, Florida and Vermont.

BUILD ROAD CULVERTS RIGHT

Waste of Time and Money Unless Work Is Done on Approved Plan Under Competent Direction.

No culvert that is improperly built is safe or economical. On the contrary, it is a waste of money to spend it on such work unless the work is well done on an approved plan under competent direction. There must be calculation as to the volume of water the culverts are to carry off in rainy season and flood time, not in dry weather, and as to the durability of the material used in their construction. There can be no skimping on culverts or bridges or drainage without waste. It is better to have these three things permanent and adequate than to have an expensive form of road surfacing if a choice must be made. The man who built his house on shifting sand instead of solid rock has been regarded for centuries as the prince of fools.

AUTOMOBILE IS BIG FACTOR

Present War Has Found in Roads and Motor Cars Means of Moving Great Numbers of Men.

Two conditions of civic life emphasize the necessity for good roads. One is war. The Roman roads were built because Rome had vast armies to move. The present European war has kept thousands upon thousands of men busy in eastern Prussia and western Poland building roads in territories where before there were only swampy trails. Many of the roads in Belgium and northern France were built during previous wars, when vast armies must be moved quickly, so that the present war has found in roads and motorcars the means of moving great armies as never before. Good highways have made possible a rapid transportation of troops which is astonishing the entire world.

IMPORTANCE OF ROAD DRAGS

More to the Work Than Standing on Implement Holding Reins Over Team of Horses.

Perhaps the ease of dragging the road and the simplicity of the King road drag has been overemphasized. At any rate, there is more to road dragging than standing on a drag and holding the reins over a team of horses. And there is more to drag building than merely pinning together of the two slabs of a split log. On the other hand, almost any sort of driving down the road with the roughest possible pair of slabs, slapped together in any old way, will change the ordinary road for the better.

How to buy real hosiery

Satisfaction

The right way is to buy hosiery that exactly fits your feet and your needs.

If your feet burn, ache, and quickly tire, maybe it's the fault of misfit hosiery that gathers, binds, or quickly tears.

Come in today and buy a pair of Ipswich socks or stockings. Over 50,000,000 pairs were sold last year. Made in styles that range all the way from sturdy, cushiony, 25-cent cotton socks to the beautiful fibre silk and lisle flare-top stockings at 75 cents.

Determining Age of Planets.

A novel idea in estimating the physical condition of planets was put forth by M. Veronnet before the Academie des Sciences at a recent meeting in Paris. He based it upon a calculation of the quantity of water that rocks such as granite and porphyry absorb before becoming perfectly dry.

He said that on the moon all water has been completely absorbed by slow diffusion as the rocks gradually cooled. Venus is still surrounded by a thick layer of vapor, while no water has yet been condensed on the surface of Mercury, this planet being still in a condition in which its geological life has not begun, and consequently no clouds have yet formed on its surface.

M. Veronnet calculates that the rocks of our earth now contain absorbed water which would cover the earth to an average depth of about 400 metres.

Titled Lady as Shoemaker.

It is an interesting fact that, although the women of the United Kingdom have invaded most employments that formerly were followed chiefly by men, the shoemaking trade has not experienced much change in this respect. Yet, something over a hundred years ago, shoemaking was one of the "employments of high society" in London. Lady Sarah Spencer, in a letter to her brother, written about the year 1808, says: "In the evening we divide our time between music and shoemaking, which is now the staple trade of the family. I am today in a state of great vanity, for I have made a pair of shoes—there is news for you. So if all other trades fail I shall certainly establish myself, cross-legged, at the corner of an alley to earn a livelihood in the midst of leather, awls and hammers."

Paint From Hands.

Paint and varnish can easily be removed from one's hands by first rubbing any kind of grease or lard well into hands, then washing them with warm water and soap.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen Costigan who died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Michael Nugent of Hill street, Saugerties, on Tuesday was held this morning at St. Mary's church. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery, Saugerties.

Lillian E., wife of William O. Dougherty died at her home, No. 29 Orchard street, Wednesday evening in her 28rd year. The funeral will be held from the late residence Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment in Montrepose cemetery.

The funeral of the late Watson Lewis, who died suddenly at his home, Elmwood, Saugerties, on Sunday, took place Thursday afternoon at his late home. Ulster Lodge, No. 113, F. & A. M., attended in a body. High Worshipful C. N. DeWitt, past district deputy grand master, of Kingston, delivered the oration. Rev. F. M. Parsons of the Methodist church officiated. The remains were taken by auto cortege to Mt. Marion cemetery for interment.

The funeral of Miss Helen R. McCardle took place this morning from her late residence at 9 o'clock and from St. Joseph's church at 9:30 where a requiem mass was offered for the repose of her soul by the Rev. George Murdock. Father Murdock spoke with feeling of the Christian character of the deceased and urged the mourners and friends pray that God might grant them such a death bed. He also accompanied the remains to St. Mary's cemetery, and officiated at the services there. The floral offerings were many and beautiful. The bearers were William McManus, William Carr, John McCardle, Thomas McCardle, cousins of the deceased and William Rodell and Cornelius Ryan.

Mary Frances Halloran, wife of T. Joseph O'Grady, of Shokan, died Thursday evening at the Benedictine Sanitarium after a brief illness. Besides her husband she is survived by her mother, in Ireland, three sisters, Mrs. Pease and Miss Feeley of Springfield, Mass., and Miss Agnes Halloran of Dr. City. Mrs. O'Grady was a graduate of the Benedictine Sanitarium Training School, having been graduated with the class of 1912. After her graduation she was in charge of the Ashokan hospital at Brown Station in which position she continued until her marriage to Mr. O'Grady. She has a large circle of friends in this city who mourn her loss. The body was taken from the sanitarium this morning to the 11:02 West Shore train and sent to Springfield, Mass., where services and burial will take place Monday.

William N. Burhans, of Saugerties, died Thursday afternoon at his home on Partition street of hardening of the arteries, his illness dating since Christmas of last year. He was born June 17, 1851, at Flatbush, now town of Ulster. The greater part of his life was spent in Saugerties where he was actively engaged in business until by retirement a few years ago. For several years he was with Burhans & Stannard, lime, stone dealers, then with his father-in-law, the late Ralph Van Etten; for several years supervisor of the town of Saugerties; conducted a successful coal and lumber business which is now succeeded by the Saugerties Coal & Lumber Co. He was an efficient postmaster of Saugerties, serving two terms, filled the office of justice of the peace and was one of the town assessor. At the time of death, he was a past master of Ulster Lodge, No. 113, F. & A. M., past regent of Confidence Lodge, No. 51, I. O. O. F., and an ex-chief ranger [illegible] department, and the most worthy patron of Diamond Chapter, O. E. S. He is survived by a brother, Robert, of Pasadena, Cal. The funeral will take place at the late home Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, with interment in Montrepose cemetery.

ESOPUS.

Esopus, March 22.—Mrs. Stewart of Kingston, mother of Walter Stewart of the village, with Mrs. Henry Bartsch of the above city and Mr. Helen Worth of Wappingers, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stewart on Wednesday of this week.

The pupils of the village school have been given their honor Red Cross pins as a reward for the payment of the sum apportioned the district. As previously mentioned the amount was in excess of the apportionment, which feat causes [illegible] pupil and teacher. Miss Margaret Sheehan, to feel well repaid with their efforts.

Mrs. Peter Schiede and Edward Lundy are canvassing for the boxes of Columbia war fund and from the present outlook we prophesy a successful ending to their efforts.

DAMAGE BY MUSKRATS

They Are Responsible for Considerable Injury to Crops.

Little Animals Are Most Valuable for Fur and Should Be Protected and Trapped Where They Are Not Troublesome.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Muskrats are responsible for considerable damage to growing crops, irrigation ditches, mill dams, etc. They are the most valuable fur animals in the United States and when they are not troublesome should be protected and trapped for fur, but in some localities it is necessary to employ measures to reduce their numbers or prevent them from causing injury. This can usually be done by trapping, and the sale of the pelts makes such activities profitable. Often crops may be protected by the erection of wire-mesh fences between them and the marsh or pond where the animals live. Such fences should reach at least six inches beneath the surface of the ground to prevent the muskrats burrowing under. In narrow waterways barrel traps have proved efficient in catching large numbers of these animals.

Injury by Muskrats.

By erecting more permanent works, owners of embankments, dams, etc., may guard against injuries to their property by muskrats. A more general use of concrete, for example, has greatly minimized such troubles. The more liberal use of gravel or coarse sand for the surface of embankments has been found effective, since the animals will not burrow in soil that fills the hole as fast as they open it.

Destruction of muskrats, where this is desirable, as well as their protection, which is in most cases advisable, is discussed in a recent farmer's bulletin, No. 869, of the United States department of agriculture.

MORE COMMON GRAIN PESTS

United States Department of Agriculture Is Endeavoring to Standardize Fumigants.

Anticipating an unusual prevalence of the more common grain weevils in stored grains this winter, the bureau of entomology of the United States department of agriculture is exercising especial efforts to standardize fumigants for these pests and determine methods of application on a large scale to prevent their damage as much as possible. Reports to the bureau are to the effect that persons who are storing grain may expect more weevils [illegible]

SPREAD MANURE OVER FIELDS

When This Method Is Not Practicable It Should Be Piled Under Shelter of Some Kind.

The best way to handle manure is to spread it over the fields as promptly as possible. The fresh manure is far better on the land it is to enrich than put in piles in the barn. When it is not practical to spread the manure as fast as it accumulates in the barn it may be piled under shelter till such a time as it may be spread. It is best to have a firm surface to pile it on.

START CAULIFLOWER IN BOX

Cauliflower plants should be started early in boxes of rich soil; the sweet corn should be sown in hills three feet each way, and when the cauliflower plants are large enough transplant between rows of sweet corn in deep holes two or three feet apart and with both crops plant but a few rows at a time to provide a long cropping season, so cauliflower will follow corn for table use, being a late maturing crop.

ASPARAGUS BED READY EARLY

Pecuniary Advantages to Be Reaped Sufficient to Satisfy Most Ambitious Gardener.

An asparagus bed is ready for use in very early spring, when everyone craves fresh vegetables. It is easy to grow after once started, and yet an asparagus bed is rarely found on a farm, though the pecuniary advantages to be reaped from it are sufficient to satisfy the most ambitious gardener.

DRINKING WATER FOR FOWLS

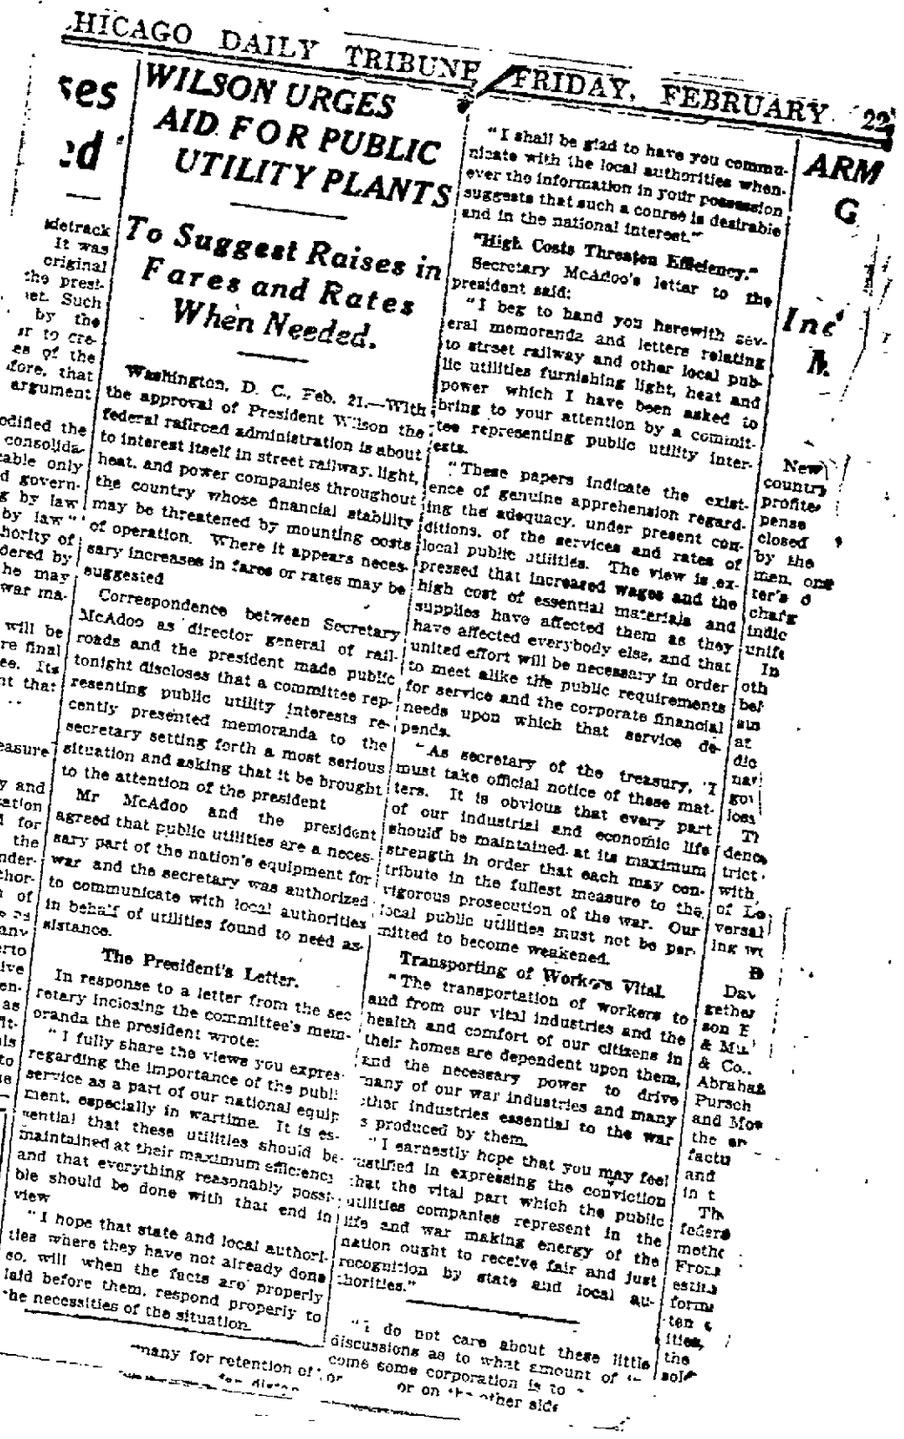
Drinking water almost at the freezing point or water with ice in it, hinders egg production. In extreme weather, warm water (the ordinary supply with the chill taken off) should be furnished at least twice a day and three times a day if convenient.

Advice to Sentimental.

When a fellow's in love he might as well go right up to her and make a fool of himself first as last. Anything is better than holding it in until he gets spontaneous combustion.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

The Public Utility Situation
As Viewed by Pres. Wilson and Sec. McAdoo



CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 22

WILSON URGES AID FOR PUBLIC UTILITY PLANTS

To Suggest Raises in Fares and Rates When Needed.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—With the approval of President Wilson the federal railroad administration is about to interest itself in street railway, light, heat, and power companies throughout the country whose financial stability may be threatened by mounting costs of operation. Where it appears necessary increases in fares or rates may be suggested.

Correspondence between Secretary McAdoo as director general of railroads and the president made public tonight discloses that a committee representing public utility interests recently presented memoranda to the secretary setting forth a most serious situation and asking that it be brought to the attention of the president.

Mr. McAdoo and the president agreed that public utilities are a necessary part of the nation's equipment for war and the secretary was authorized to communicate with local authorities in behalf of utilities found to need assistance.

The President's Letter.

In response to a letter from the secretary inclosing the committee's memoranda the president wrote:

"I fully share the views you express regarding the importance of the public service as a part of our national equipment, especially in wartime. It is essential that these utilities should be maintained at their maximum efficiency and that everything reasonably possible should be done with that end in view.

"I hope that state and local authorities where they have not already done so, will when the facts are properly laid before them, respond properly to the necessities of the situation.

"I shall be glad to have you communicate with the local authorities whenever the information in your possession suggests that such a course is desirable and in the national interest."

"High Costs Threaten Efficiency."

Secretary McAdoo's letter to the president said:

"I beg to hand you herewith several memoranda and letters relating to street railway and other local public utilities furnishing light, heat and power which I have been asked to bring to your attention by a committee representing public utility interests.

"These papers indicate the existence of genuine apprehension regarding the adequacy, under present conditions, of the services and rates of local public utilities. The view is expressed that increased wages and the high cost of essential materials and supplies have affected them as they have affected everybody else, and that united effort will be necessary in order to meet alike the public requirements for service and the corporate financial needs upon which that service depends.

"As secretary of the treasury, I must take official notice of these matters. It is obvious that every part of our industrial and economic life should be maintained at its maximum strength in order that each may contribute in the fullest measure to the rigorous prosecution of the war. Our local public utilities must not be permitted to become weakened.

Transporting of Workers Vital.

"The transportation of workers to and from our vital industries and the health and comfort of our citizens in their homes are dependent upon them, and the necessary power to drive many of our war industries and many other industries essential to the war is produced by them.

"I earnestly hope that you may feel justified in expressing the conviction that the vital part which the public utilities companies represent in the life and war making energy of the nation ought to receive fair and just recognition by state and local authorities."

"I do not care about these little discussions as to what amount of [illegible] come some corporation is to [illegible] or on the other side

AMERICAN BUSINESS NOT "USUAL" NOW

Dwight W. Morrow, now on an important government mission, addressing the people of New Jersey on War Savings, said:

The War Savings movement simply repeats to the people of this country the solemn injunction which our President laid upon us all on the 15th day of last April:

"Let every man and every woman assume the duty of careful, provident use and expenditure as a public duty, as a dictate of patriotism which no one can now expect ever to be excused or forgiven for ignoring."

You may well ask me of what value it is to release labor unless it can find its way to the place where it is needed. That is a vital question for you farmers. It is a vital question for all essential industries. It is a peculiarly vital question for the released workers. Of course it is going to be a difficult task to get each man placed where he will be most valuable in the country's service. The department of labor of the government is already concerned with that question. It will be necessary to have employment agencies; it even may be necessary to do as they have done in England—to enlist labor volunteers, who will move from one part of the country to another. Entirely apart from anything that the government may be able to do, is it not well, however, for us all to remember that as a nation we have one great common stock of goods and services, that we should increase that stock as much as possible by efforts beyond anything that we have ever put forward before and that we should also slacken up as much as we reasonably can in our personal demands upon that common stock of goods and services?

Movies a Necessity.

The War Savings movement does not ask people to push themselves back into a civilization that we have outgrown. It asks that the productive capacity of the country be utilized to the utmost limit, but it asks that this productive capacity, by the voluntary co-operation of the entire people of the country, be directed as rapidly as possible to the diligent and efficient prosecution of the war. It is not a gloomy doctrine. It does not seek to lay down rules as to what is or is not a necessity for any individual man or woman or child. It recognizes the imperative need for good health, mental as well as physical. Some people in England in the earlier days of the war believed that it was waste to go to the moving picture shows. It is true that children saved their pennies by not going to the "movies," but men gradually realized that, after all, it was poor economy to contribute money for recreation and community exercises of one kind or another at the front and to have no relaxation at home, and the moving picture theaters in England today are doing a very large business. But running through all the moving picture shows there is some education upon the great issues of the war.

Man cannot live by bread alone! No one has suggested that the brass be taken out of the instruments of the regimental band in order to produce a few more cartridge cases. No one has suggested that the flag be cut up in order to make garments. Men are kept warm by other than material things. People who have spiritual as well as physical needs need no argument to prove that a flag can render greater service when waving aloft than when made into clothing. The War Savings movement asks for what the President of the United States asked in his Thanksgiving proclamation—"a reasonable and practical economy." It asks each to determine this economy for himself, to determine it with conscientious appreciation of his physical and mental and spiritual needs. It asks him to determine it also with an appreciation of his country's needs, with an appreciation of the sober fact that when he buys goods and services with his money he may be preventing the government from getting goods and services that are needed and needed badly at the front.

Can't Have "Business as Usual."

One must be blind to all that has gone on in the world in the last three years to think that we can have "business as usual." People have quit talking about business as usual in England. There are 5,000,000 men in uniform there. If you translate that into American terms it means that they have about the same proportion of their population under arms as we will have when 10,000,000 men are serving with the colors. How have they done it? They have recognized that England is not engaged in a usual business. Women have taken many places formerly occupied by men; women are driving taxicabs, tilling the soil, even working in the munitions factories. Of course there cannot and must not be business as usual in this country. Secretary McAdoo has seen the situation clearly. In his annual report, issued early in last December, he said:

"'Business as usual' cannot, of course, be adopted as the guiding principle in time of war. It is a wholly wrong theory and should find no advocacy or acceptance by the sensible and patriotic people of America. Business must be readjusted to the war making function of the nation."

The business of this whole country at the present time is war. That is not a usual business for this peace loving nation. It is a most unusual business—a business so unusual that we have never seen its like before; a business so unusual that if we conduct it properly, please God, we shall never see its like again.

Don't Have a Double Chin.

An investigator declares that the double chin can be controlled and very largely mitigated. It depends largely upon the carriage and pose of the head. The person who has a repeated chin, or is threatened with one, should recall and practice Dr. Edward Everett Hale's famous advice: "Look up, not down." The person who sits, or stands, or walks, with an erect body and keeps the chin up-tilted, can defy the crease and the fatty ridges.

HIS REALIZATION OF WAR

The man with the tall silk hat and the pin-striped trousers and the fur-collared overcoat stomped out of his limousine Monday in front of the downtown drug store, where he usually dismounts each morning to buy his day's supplies of real Havanas. He waved an airy hand at his chauffeur and squared his shoulders beneath the fur of the overcoat to the Crocker Land air. Everything was all right.

Then the man with the tall silk hat and the pin-striped trousers and the fur-collared overcoat strode on in toward the cigar counter and flung a dollar bill on the showcase. He noticed there were no lights in the humidors of the cases. Then he saw no clerks were there. Behind the drug counters he finally spied a man he knew.

"Let me have a half-dozen smokes," he said.

"Sorry, but nothin' doin' this morning," said the man he knew.

"Why—what's wrong here?"

"Not selling today. Fuel administration, you know."

Slowly a great lump rose in the throat of the man with the tall hat and the pin-striped trousers. Hurriedly he felt in all his pockets. Then he rushed out to see whether the auto had left for home. Then he hurried to another drug store. Then, sadly, he went to the office.

As he entered the door, the young $20-a-week clerk took his usual stogie from his mouth and exhaled a cloud of the bitter smoke that had long made him hated by the stenographers. The man with the tall hat hurried over to him.

"For heaven's sake, Johnny, let me have a stogie, will you?"

"Sorry, boss, but this is all I got. I found this un in my pocket this morning—left over from Sunday."

The man with the tall hat went in and sat down. He called his most rapid stenographer and began to dictate to her.

His first letter—it should have been purely about stocks and bonds—began like this:

Britain Leans to Decimal System.

The movement in England looking toward the adoption of the decimal system for currency, which has the backing of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, is gaining ground. The London Statist states that the association has resolved to press the matter upon the attention of the government and to urge the introduction of a bill in parliament. It is proposed to retain the sovereign as standard value of a thousand mills; the half sovereign 500 mills, the four shilling piece 200 mills, the two-shilling piece or florin 100 mills, the half florin, commonly known as the shilling, 50 mills, and the sixpence 25 mills. Of subsidiary coinage it is recommended to coin ten-mill pieces and five-mill pieces. Below these it is suggested that a four-mill, three-mill and two-mill piece also be coined, and it found desirable a coin representing one mill. As the farthing is so little used it is not regarded as likely that anything below the value of a half penny will be coined.

The Kitchen in War Time.

The private kitchen has got to go. It is scarcely possible to doubt that now. With gas and fuel at their present prices, and likely to mount steadily higher, the great majority, as winter advances, will certainly be driven to living in one room. The economy effected by that simple measure will be enormous, and it entails no very serious hardship, given a satisfactory arrangement of the cooking problem. That problem could be practically solved tomorrow by the voluntary surrender, even in a very limited degree, of the domestic isolation in which the British family lives. If every two households agree to dine together only, it would be more than half solved. It is a matter in which the merits of a voluntary system over any compulsory arrangement are more obvious even than usual. But if the public continues to set its face obstinately against it, the compulsion will certainly come. —London News.

Absorbent Cotton Twice Used.

Through the ingenuity of a French chemist who was struck by the fact that in the military hospitals of Paris alone about 4,400 pounds of absorbent cotton was used daily, a process has been developed which makes it possible to use soiled cotton a second time. The first step is the removal of all grease by boiling ten or twelve hours in a soda solution, or by treating it under pressure for three hours in a sealed container filled with the same solution. After this the cotton is thoroughly washed in a machine and all the moisture removed by placing it in a high-speed centrifugal drier. Drying is followed by bleaching with hypochlorine of lime and a second washing and drying. Finally the purified product is carded, packed and again sterilized.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Well Rehearsed.

The Bavarians in a captured trench the moment our fellows appeared automatically put up their hands, yelled, "Mercy, kamerad," and formed up into single files for passing into the cages, relates an English soldier. A stolid Tommy, noticing the precision with which they carried out the latter movement, exclaimed, "What organizers these Fritzes are. They even practiced surrender drill."

Completing a Cycle.

"Have you tried the substitutes for meat?"

"Yes. I'm waiting for prices to keep working up till I can eat meat again as a substitute for the substitutes."

Literal.

"Josh Billings said he was an honest man because jail life didn't agree with him." "That was frank, wasn't it?" "No, it was Josh. Never heard of Frank Billings."—Boston Transcript.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

Professor Dunbar gave the students a very instructive talk on Thursday morning, his theme being that the students should determine what their course in life was to be and use every opportunity that came in their way to attain their goal of success. When they desire a certain thing, go where that thing is kept to get it.

The A. A. Minstrels.

The night for the A. A. minstrels has arrived. Come and see them at the high school tonight at 8 o'clock.

They are the best yet. They will cheer you if you are sad. They will make you laugh and grow thin. If your business is poor come where you can forget it. The laugh will take the gloom out of your system.

More than this, the Athletic Association is the bank for the athletic teams. If they are financially well off the teams are successful. If they are broke the teams are unsuccessful. If the teams are unsuccessful the name Kingston is pulled down from the top of the ladder. Can you as patriotic citizens of America and loyal Kingstonians permit such a catastrophe to occur? Impossible.

Parents, you are cordially invited to come and visit the high school, to come and see how your children act when they are out. Make believe you are young again and come enjoy a good laugh with kiddies. They will appreciate it. You will enjoy it.

Tonight, high school auditorium, 8 o'clock, A. A. Minstrels show. Dancing afterwards for students and alumni and all those present.

The program is as follows:

Mason Dixie Line, Opening Chorus.
Goodbye Broadway, Channing Clapp
Smile, Smile, Smile ....Kenneth Zeh
Wild, Wild Woman.....Bob Adams
After the War ....Milford Douglas
Whistlin' Coon .....H. F. Dunbar
When the Bells in the Light House Ring Ding Dong....Russel Dana
Specialty......Prickly Heat Quartet
Long Boy ....Harry Connelly
Rambling Rose....Glenford Krause
Star Spangled Banner..........
Closing Chorus.
Orchestra ....Selected
Dialogue—Rosenthal & Cooper.
Prof H. F. Dunbar, director.
Dana, interlocutor.

Endmen—Dunbar, Howard, Muller, Kirchner, Adams, Gibson.

TABASCO HEIGHTS.

Tabasco Heights, March 22.—The auction at Jacob Gorseline's on Wednesday was largely attended. Mr. Gorseline and family will move to Pataukunk this week. They will be greatly missed as they have always lived in this place and were good neighbors and we all wish them the best of luck in their new home.

The young people of this place, who are employed at Cornwall, are expected home for Easter.

Our teacher, Miss C. M. Kolb, was pleasantly entertained on Saturday and Sunday last at the home of Mrs. W. H. Gorseline.

Jerry Van Kleeck is moving on his farm he purchased of William H. Gorseline.

The many friends of Miss Mary Terwilliger are glad to hear that she is on the road to recovery, after being seriously ill for the past month.

Mrs. Asa Wynkoop and son, Kennet, and daughter, Esther, called on her cousin, Mrs. C. J. Terwilliger, at Mombaccus on Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Terwilliger had a stroke of paralysis, but is some better.

Russell Gray is ill with the German measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wynkoop of Krumville spent Wednesday at Asa Wynkoop's and also attended the auction.

Mrs. Anna Berger has returned home from New York and Brooklyn, where she has been spending a few weeks with her children.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Little Miss Marjorie Jeannette Winchell celebrated her fourth birthday Thursday at her home on Salem street, Port Ewen, by entertaining twelve of her little friends. Dainty refreshments were served and all declared Miss Marjorie a royal entertainer. Those present were Grace Lynn, Edna Vincent, Mildred and Jeannette Decker, Elmina Hotaling, Unice Short, Bernice Craig, Rosamond Lapman, Katherine Kenny, Annette Munson and Grace Hotaling.

Saulpaugh-Hicks.

Miss Alice E. Hicks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Hicks of No. 128 O'Neil street, and Frank W. Saulpaugh of this city, were united in marriage at the parsonage of the Third M. E. Church in Troy Tuesday afternoon. They were attended by Miss Cora Hicks, a sister of the bride, and Curtis W. DuBois of Troy. After a honeymoon trip they will reside at No. 128 O'Neil street. They have the well wishes of a host of friends.

Eighteen Cases of Measles.

At the present time there are eighteen cases of measles, a dozen cases of mumps and five whooping cough cases in Kingston, according to the records of the board of health. Quarantine precautions are being taken to prevent a spread of the measles, and other cases.

Guard for Finger Ring.

An ingenious new guard for finger rings is worn inside a ring and presses against the finger to prevent it turning, at the same time being almost invisible.

DIED.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 22.—There was a steady tone to the stock market at the beginning today with prices showing fractional losses. Steel Common dropped ⅝ to 91¼, and Bethlehem fell ½ to 79⅝. Crucible, after selling up to 65, reacted to 64½, and Baldwin was off ½ to 77. Marine Preferred declined ⅜ to 96, and Mexican Petroleum fell 1 point to 94½. Distillers yielded ⅝ to 40⅞, and losses of ½ were sustained in Industrial Alcohol, American Can, American Telephone and Corn Products. Reading was off ⅞ to 82¾, and Union Pacific to 120⅞. The copper stocks showed fractional losses. After the early declines a strong tone developed with many issues making substantial gains. Corn Products, which yielded ½ at the start, moved up to a new high of 38. Crucible, after declining to 64½, advanced to 65⅝. Industrial Alcohol from its low price of 124 rose to 125.

After the show of strength, following the initial declines, the market again became firm. Steel Common ranged within 91¼ and 91⅜ during the best part of the forenoon, from which it reacted to 91. Mexican Petroleum declined to 94¼, and Central Leather yielded 1⅛ to 66½. Reading dropped over one point to 82¼, and Industrial Alcohol, after advancing to above 125, fell to 123⅞.

There was a dragging tendency to the market in the late afternoon, with prices generally reflecting pressure. There was some liquidation in the standard issues. Sinclair Oil dropped to 29⅞, a loss of 2 points, and Texas Company fell 4 points to 145½. Industrial Alcohol declined to 122¾, against an earlier high of 125 while Steel Common on small dealings dropped to 90⅝.

A heavy selling movement during the late afternoon caused losses of about a point to leading issues. Reading dropped 81⅜. Steel Common fell to 90⅝, and Marine Preferred to 94⅞. Central Leather dropped to 64⅝. Oil shares were weak.

SLEPT WHILE GUNS ROARED

In the campaigns of both Antietam and Gettysburg I was an officer in a regiment of cavalry, a mere subordinate, responsible only for obedience to orders.

At Gettysburg July 3 the division to which we belonged occupied the high, partly wooded ground on the right of the line, covering the enemy's flank and rear. It was a bright July day, hot, and with white clouds slowly rolling across the sky. Neither our lines nor those of the enemy were visible to us; and the sounds of battle were hushed. Waiting for orders and for action, we dismounted, out of regard for our horses as well as for ourselves, and sat or lay on the turf.

Inured to danger by contact long and close and thoroughly tired in body and overwrought in mind we listened for the battle to begin; and shortly after noon the artillery opened. We did not know it, for we could see nothing in that direction, but it covered the famous advance of Pickett's Virginia division upon Meade's center—that wonderful feat of arms—and just then, lulled by the incessant roar of the cannon, while the fate of the army and the nation trembled in the balance, at the very crisis of the great conflict, I dropped quietly asleep. It was not heroic, but it was essentially war.—From the Autobiography of Charles Francis Adams.

HAD THOUGHT FOR OTHERS

At the information booth in a large railroad terminal a traveler asked for a time-table, which he looked through until he came to the particular table he wanted. This table he cut out with his pocketknife, and then he put the booklet with this table now gone out of it back on the counter.

It seemed a thoughtless thing to do because, lying there as it did with its outer cover smooth, somebody might have picked it up and carried it off thinking, naturally enough, that it was complete, to discover its real condition only when it was too late.

But this misfortune really befell no one, for a moment later another traveler standing near, who had seen all this done and who was perhaps more thoughtful than the first, picked up the torn time-table and carried it off to drop it in the nearest waste paper receptacle.

Siberia Has Vast Resources.

The common notion of Siberia is based on latitude and climate. Because part of it is in the arctic circle the whole vast region has been assumed to be almost beyond the pale of civilized occupancy. Notwithstanding that much has been written describing Siberia as it is, the common notion is still that it is fit only for penal settlements and that the nihilists and other political exiles were sent to these settlements as a living death. This is not far from the truth. But the inhospitable regions in which the penal settlements were placed are far from being all Siberia, and even some of these districts are capable of sustaining the vigorous inhabitants of northern climates.

Siberia, in the economic sense, has all the resources which go to make a vast stretch of territory self-sustaining as an independent nation. It has forests, mines and great agricultural regions where every product of the temperate climate is capable of cultivation. The timber is in the north and west. The mines are in widely scattered districts.

Reflections.

His face would have stopped a clock. But how can one wonder at it when one learns that he was a wandering lecturer? Anyway, no one had even seen anything approaching the face that he hauled into Puddle-in-the-Clay one wet and muddy November night and set up in the town hall, allowing words—calculated to make every drinker of anything stronger than barley-water at once reform and spend the rest of his existence in sackcloth and ashes—slide out of the hole in the middle of it.

"Yes, my dear brothers," said the weird looking person, "for more than forty years I have shunned the glass."

"And I bloomin' well believe yer, guv'nor," said a loud and hearty voice from the middle of the audience. "If I'd a face like yours I wouldn't never look in a pail of water even."—London Ideas.

The Magnetic Compass.

Experiments with magnets known to the scientists 2,500 years ago, which, developed by Doctor Gilbert and Peter Perigrinus, led up to the present-day admiralty compass of Kelvin, were shown recently by Prof. J. A. Fleming, professor of electrical engineering, University of London, at the Royal Institute.

"The earth is a magnet," said the professor, "and every piece of iron that has stood in a vertical position for any length of time is magnetized by the earth. You can try it on your garden railings."

The hostelry sign, "The Goat and Compass," he said, "does not refer to the mariner's friend, but is a contraction of the saying, 'God encompasses us,' and the compass takes its name, not from the magnetism which governs its working, but from the circular card which encompasses the needle.

Fascination of the Sea.

To those who live on the coast or near enough to visit it frequently, no words need be said in praise of the mighty ocean. Unlike the mountains, the prairie and the forest, the sea never grows monotonous. It is "a mere expanse of water," if you will, but it is such a varied expanse that one never grows weary of looking at it. It is this fascination that binds a sailor to his profession. His work is hard, the perils are many, and the pay and food are alike poor, but once a sailor he can never willingly drudge on land again. Even in his old age and crippled, he loves to haunt the seashore and gaze on the element he once lived upon.

A Youthful Violinist.

INTERESTING ITEMS ABOUT THE SCOUTS

Through the kindness of Senator Walton the scouts now have at their disposal a large supply of state publications. Among these are pamphlets on fish and game laws, white pine blister rust, increasing fish production, woodlot forestry, shade trees, forest taxation, the basket willow, reforesting, Arbor Day planting, resources of the forest preserve, etc.

Wood Collection.

A collection of some fifty pieces of wood representing the common woods of New York has been received from the State College of Forestry. Each piece is labeled with its common name and its scientific name, the location in which it grows, its weight per cubic foot etc., and the purposes for which the wood is used. This set will prove very helpful to scouts in recognizing different kinds of wood.

Fire Without Matches.

Several scouts have had success in getting a fire with new firemaking set at headquarters. It is a very easy matter for two scouts working together to get fire but the record of getting a fire alone is still open.

Sir Baden Powell.

Books For The Soldiers.

With the exception of about 15 books from troop No. 6 all of the 150 books on exhibition in the window at headquarters were contributed by about 6 scouts from troop No. 5 Way give all the honors to a few scouts when every scout has a chance to give a soldier at least one good book to read One scout got over 300 merit points for the books brought in There are 5 merit points given for each book We must get our share of this work done this week as there are other jobs coming Help tie the home-fire to the camp-fire with a book Come and see the window display and all the books that were brought in by a few scouts.

Liberty Loan Meeting.

Plans are now being made for a big meeting to be held at the opening of the Third Liberty Loan. The War Service emblems are here and will be presented at the meeting. A special program will be arranged and the public invited to see the stunts that scouts do. Each troop is asked to prepare a special stunt Have you bought a guard rope? Have you ordered a scout staff?

Scout Supplies.

A new stock of scout supplies have arrived and will be sold to registered scouts. They include writing paper, watch fobs, drinking cups, axes, knives, lanyards, guard ropes, post cards, and uniforms Get your camp equipment early and avoid the rush.

Troop Items—Troop No. 5.

At the meeting of the troop held at the troop headquarters on Tuesday, the Red Trailer Patrol was the highest standing patrol with over 700 points. Jack DeWitt was the honor scout The next meeting will be held Tuesday, March 26. All scouts are requested to attend as plans for the third Liberty Loan will be made. All registration fees should be in by the [illegible] scout may be registered before the start of the Liberty Loan.

Troop No. 6.

There will be no regular meeting of the troop this week, owing to the absence of the scoutmaster Each patrol is expected to meet and make plans As yet only a dozen books have been turned in for the soldiers and sailors

Note—No report has been received from Troops No. 1 and No. 4. The Troop Scribes must be asleep or dead

Armory Drill.

At the drill yesterday Sergeant Whittaker gave different scouts charge of the company and each one drilled the entire body for a few minutes. No definite appointments were made but next week patrol leaders will be appointed to drill a squad of scouts All scouts should turn out and get into the competition for officers

Hike Saturday

All scouts who want to take out door tests should meet at the Burgevin building on Fair street at 1 tomorrow The Scout Executive will take the scouts on a hike if the weather is fair and tests will be given

Red Cross at School 7.

This evening School No. 7 will hold its entertainment, followed by dancing at the school, for the benefit of the Red Cross Junior Auxiliary fund. While all of the program is exceptionally good, the part to be taken by the school children themselves will prove of special interest. A big crowd is expected. The program will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

TWO OF KINGSTON'S COLORED SOLDIERS

PRIVATE WILLIAM JACKSON.

Battery D 349th Field Artillery, Camp Dix, N J Private Jackson has been confined to the base hospital in camp and had a very serious operation performed on him and is now convalescing.

PRIVATE JOHN DU BOIS.

WATER PRESSURE BECOMING NORMAL

Water pressure is rapidly becoming normal throughout the city it was stated today at the water board office in the city hall This winter has been exceptionally hard on the residents of the city, especially those residing on the high points who have been without water for a great part of the time. This was due to no fault of the water depatment but to the fact that a break in the low pressure main made it necessary to supply the city with water from the high pressure main only it was also due to the fact that all over the city householders found it necessary to allow the water to run full force from the faucets to prevent water pipes from freezing Even then the water pipes froze, and today there are still some service pipes that remain frozen.

Women Voters to Meet.

This evening the women of Kingston, who are over the age of 21 years, are one and all, invited to attend the meeting at the Rondout Presbyterian church this evening, to learn more of their duties as citizens having the responsibility of the ballot now in their hands. It is expected that the entire body of Kingston women will be formed into an effective organization at this evening's meeting, which is called for 7:30 o'clock.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

There is a difference between efficiency and effectiveness Efficiency is doing in the best way something that makes onesolf better off, effectiveness is doing in the best way something that makes other people better off.

GOOD EATING.

From stale bread cut six slices, remove the crusts and butter the bread.

Put through a food chopper sufficient fresh coconut from which the brown skin has been pared to make a cupful and a half. Separate the whites and yolks of three eggs, beat the yolks with half a cupful of sugar, a half teaspoonful of vanilla and one pint of milk Cut the bread in half-inch dice. Arrange half of it in a baking dish, sprinkling one quarter of the coconut through it. Pour over it half of the raw custard, add the remainder of the bread, another quarter of the coconut and the rest of the custard. Bake in a moderate oven until set in the center. Spread the top with a layer of quince jelly, cover with the remainder of the coconut and over all heap the whites beaten to a stiff froth and sweetened with three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Sift sugar thickly over the top and brown in the oven.

Pittsburgh Potatoes.—Wash and pare potatoes and cut in half-inch cubes. There should be one quart. Put in a stewpan with one small onion chopped fine, and cover with boiling salted water, cook five minutes, add three canned pimentoes drained and cut in strips, and cook five minutes; drain and put into a buttered baking dish. Melt four tablespoonfuls of drippings, add the same amount of flour, cook until well blended; then add two cupfuls of milk gradually stirring constantly. Bring to the boiling point and add a half pound of good cheese, grated, with three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt and an eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Pour this sauce over the potatoes and bake in the oven until brown.

Puree of Pea-Pods.—Chop the pods from two quarts of fresh peas, add five cupfuls of cold water and put on to cook for an hour and a half, then rub through a coarse sieve. There should be three cupfuls of the puree. Add three cupfuls of milk, a tablespoonful of sugar and salt and pepper to taste. Thicken with two tablespoonfuls each of fat and flour. Let boil up and serve piping hot.

SAVE THE MONEY THAT GROWS IN YOUR POCKET

By EUGENE P. LYLE, JR.

Suppose in passing a post office, bank, or drug store, you saw a window display of five-dollar bills marked down to $4.14

Well, that is what you will see, now shortly, in actual fact and to every practical intent. The Sale is to be on from December 1 next until January 1—a month of Unprecedented Bargains in Five Dollar Bills, slashed to the remarkable figure of $4.14 during this month only!

There is no nigger in this woodpile. They are good bills—in fact, a brand new issue, not even shopworn. In cut and pattern they are a radical departure—a totally new and attractive creation—something "different" for buyers of discernment. But you will have to see them to know and appreciate. They may look more like stamps than bills, but they're money just the same. And any time you don't like them, you can change them back into the old-style money that you are accustomed to.

They will be worth keeping, though. You buy them at the knock-down price of $4.14, and if you keep them five years you get $5.00 apiece for them. But even if you don't, you can't lose. No, you win. At last here is a proposition where you can't do anything but win. The day you buy one of those bargains, you can get back what you paid for it. But if you keep it for one month after the Sale closes, you can get one cent more than you paid for it. And so on, every month means another cent, until finally on January 1, 1923, you get $5.00 for it, or 87 cents more than you paid for it.

You have had money that burns in your pocket, and after it had burned its way out, you doubtless thought it very unsatisfactory money But did you ever have money that grew in your pocket? Well, fill your pockets with the new kind, and Feel It Grow!

Assuredly this new-style money is going to be the rage. In these United States it will be something abso-lute-ly new And there's going to be a rush to the bargain counter. Human nature is that way, for everybody will want to convert his money that doesn't grow into the new money that does grow. So begin saving now, and be ready for the rush. However, don't bother to save more than a thousand dollars—at least, not for yourself—because there's a limit to this good thing. That is, not more than a thousand dollars' worth of these new goods will be sold to any one customer.

Nothing more now, but details of the Gigantic Sacrificial Sale will appear later—Watch for them' Watch sharp' It will be for one month only—December 1 to January 1, remember! That's the month. Get ready, brother—get ready! Buy the Money that Grows, and Feel It Grow!

The Ex-Czarina.

I rub my eyes when I read that the czarina is a deeply scheming, intriguante who had ambiguous relations with Rasputin and aimed at the success of Germany over the country she had adopted by marriage as her own. It is only necessary to cast my memory back to the time when I was just entering womanhood and Princess Alexandra Alix was a girl some ten years my junior. Certainly I knew the shy, reserved simple child well enough to realize that she had not the mental development for any form of intrigue. Residence at Buckingham palace under the keen critical eye of an august grandmother, an eye that nothing could possibly escape, did not make for striking individuality, nor did the quiet simplicity of the German home, and the princess grew up beneath the double burden of surveillance and etiquette sharing the quiet intellectual life of an adored mother. Yet she had a certain measure of high spirits, loved tennis and dancing, and having tuned her life to play its small part in the great household orchestra, seemed happy enough.—The Bookman.
